

3.1

Translation: Just as the lord of snakes is the foundation of the regions of the earth along with their mountains and forests, so Kuṇḍalinī is the foundation of all systems of yoga.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.124, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 71v (attrib. HP)

dhātrīṇām] dhātryās tu HRĀ sarveṣām] aśeṣa HRĀ

Commentary: The plural dhātrīṇām is hard to construe. Only this world has mountains and forests, but we want a plural for the comparison with tantrāṇām. Brahmānanda (Jyotsnā 3.1) understands dhātrīṇām to refer to the different regions of the earth, even though the world (dhātrī) is a single entity (dhātryā ekatve 'pi deśabhedād bhedaṁ ādāya bahuvacanam). A similar comment occurs in the Yogaprakāśikā 5.1 (yathā samastadvīpādisahitapṛthvī ādhāraḥ phaṇīndras tathā samastayogādhāraḥ kuṇḍalīty āha saśaileti). The author of the Haṭharatnāvalī circumvented this issue by adopting the reading dhātryāḥ.

3.2

Translation: When the sleeping Kuṇḍalinī awakens through the favour of the guru, then all the lotuses are pierced, and the knots too, [...]

Sources:

Śivasamhitā 4.21

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 71v (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadēva 171 (attrib. HP)

yadā jāgarti kuṇḍalī YBhD] bodhitā sukhadā bhavet YCM

Commentary: The usual meaning of jāgarti would be “is wakeful” rather than “awakens”, which explains the variant bodhitā.

3.3

Translation: [...] the empty pathway becomes the royal highway for prāṇa, the mind becomes free of support, and death is cheated.

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 72r (attrib. HP)

b: tadā] tathā YCM
c: tadā] tathā YCM
d: tadā] tathā YCM

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (a: na-vipulā)

3.4 heading

Translation: What is “the empty pathway”?

3.4

Translation: Suṣumnā, the empty pathway, the great path to the aperture of Brahman, the cremation ground, Śāmbhavī, and the middle path are synonyms.

Sources:

Cf. Amrtasiddhi 2.6

avadhūtīpadaṃ ke cic chmaśānaṃ ca mahāpatham/
ke cid vadanti ādhārāṃ suṣumnāṃ ca sarasvatīm//

Cf. Dattātreya yogaśāstra 109c–110b mahāpathaṃ śmaśānaṃ ca suṣumnāpy ekam eva hi// nāmnāṃ matāntare bhedaḥ phale bhedo na vidyate/

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 59r (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadēva 7.172 (attrib. HP)

suṣumnā YCM] prāṇasya YBhD brahmarandhra] brahmarandhraṃ YCM, mahārandhraṃ YBhD śmaśānaṃ YBhD] śmaśāni YCM ekavācakāḥ YCM] ekavācakam YBhD

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (a: na-vipulā)

3.5

Translation: Therefore, in order to do his utmost to awaken the goddess sleeping in front of the doorway of Brahman, [the yogi] should undertake the practice of mudrā.

Sources:

Śivasamhitā 4.22

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 59r (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadēva 7.173 (attrib. HP)

mudrābhyāsaṃ samācaret YBhD] mudrābhyāsaparo bhavet YCM

3.6

Translation: The great seal, the great lock, the great piercing, the sky-roving [seal], the uḍḍiyāṇa [lock], the root lock, then [the lock] called jālandhara, [...]

Sources:

Cf. Śivasamhitā 4.23

mahāmudrā mahābandho mahāvedhaś ca khecarī/jālandharo mūlabandho viparītakṛtis tathā//

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.32, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 72r (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadēva 7.174 (attrib. HP)

mahāvedhaś ca khecarī YCM YBhD] mahāvedhas tṛṭiyakaḥ HRĀ uḍḍiyāṇaṃ mūlabandhas] uḍḍiyāṇaṃ mūlabandho HRĀ YCM, uḍyāṇaṃ mūlabandhaś ca YBhD tato jālandharābhidhaḥ] bandho jālandharābhidhaḥ HRĀ YCM, bandho jālandharas tathā YBhD

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (c: ra-vipulā)

3.7

Translation: [...] the bodily position called inverted, vajrolī [and] the moving of the goddess: this group of ten mudrās and other [practices] destroys old age and death.

Sources:

Cf. Śivasamhitā 4.24

uḍyāṇaṃ caiva vajrolī daśamaṃ śakticālanam/idaṃ hi mudrādaśakaṃ mudrāṇām uttamottamam//

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.33, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 72r (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadēva 7.175 (attrib. HP) vajrolī HRĀ YBhD] tathā vai YCM idaṃ mudrādaśakaṃ] sampradāyā khecarī sā HRĀ, etad dhi mudrānavakaṃ YCM, idaṃ hi mudrādaśakaṃ YBhD jarāmaraṇanāśanam] daśa mudrāḥ prakīrtitāḥ HRĀ, jarāmaraṇavarjitam YCM, mudrāṇām uttamottamam YBhD

Commentary: The reading of α idaṃ mudrādi, is not attested by the other manuscript groups but it makes sense in so far as ‘locks’ (bandha) and ‘actions’ (karaṇa) figure among the ten techniques taught in this chapter. It is also consistent with the reference to mudrādi in 1.55. However, most manuscripts have readings, such as idaṃ hi mudrādaśakaṃ, that refer to the techniques of this chapter as only mudrās, and this is consistent with 3.104.

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (c: na-vipulā)

3.8

Translation: It has been taught by Śiva, is divine, bestows the eight supramundane powers, is beloved of all the Siddhas, is difficult for even the gods to obtain,

[...]

Testimonia:Yogacintāmaṇi f. 72r (attrib. HP)divyam] samyag YBhD sarvasiddhānāṃ YCM] sarvasiddhendra YBhD3.9*Translation: [...] should be carefully kept secret like a casket of gems [and] must not be spoken of to anyone, like sex with a respectable woman.Testimonia:Yogacintāmaṇi* f. 72r (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadēva 7.177 (attrib. HP)

yathā ratnakaraṇḍakam YCM] jarāmarāṇanāśanam YBhD

3.9*1Translation: [Together with] amarolī and sahajolī, vajrolī is considered to be threefold. I shall teach their characteristics and the details of how they should be performed.Sources:Dattātreyayogaśāstra* 31c–32bvajrolīr] vajrolī DYŚ, vajrolīr DYŚv.l.
amarolī] amaroliś DYŚv.l., cāmarolī DYŚ
sahajolī DYŚ] sahajolis DYŚv.l.3.10 heading*Translation: Of these, the great seal (mahāmudrā) [is now taught]:3.10*Translation: [The yogi] should press the perineum with the heel of the left foot, hold [the foot of] the extended leg with the hands and breathe in through the mouth.Sources:Amaraugha* 19

dhṛtvā A] kṛtvā Av.l.

Cf. Amṛtasiddhi 11.3yonim saṃpiḍya vāmena pādāmūlena yatnataḥ/savyaṃ prasāritaṃ pādaṃ karābhyāṃ dhārayed dṛḍham//

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.37, Yogacintāmaṇi ff. 72v–73r (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadeva 7.178 (attrib. HP)

dhṛtvā] kṛtvā HRĀ YCM YBhD pūrayen HRĀ YCM] dhārayed YBhD mukhe HRĀ v.l.] mukham HRĀ YCM, dṛḍham YBhD

3.11

Translation: He should apply a lock to the throat and hold the breath in the upper [part of the body]. Just as a snake hit with a staff assumes the form of a staff, [...]

Sources:

Amaraugha 20

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.37cd–38ab, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 73r (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadeva 7.179 (attrib. HP)

dhārayed YCM YBhD] pūrayed HRĀ

Commentary: The instruction to hold the breath upwards (ūrdhvataḥ) is somewhat vague. In a commentarial passage on this verse in Yuktabhavadeva 7.187, Bhavadevamīśra clarifies this by saying, ‘one should hold it higher than the heart’ (hrdayād ūrdhvato dhārayet).

3.12

Translation: [...] so the goddess Kuṇḍalinī suddenly becomes straight. Then she becomes still in the vessel with two halves.

Sources:

Amaraugha 21

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.38cd–39ab, Yogacintāmaṇi ff. 72v–73r (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadeva 7.180 (attrib. HP)

sahasā YBhD] sahaḥ HRĀ YCM tathāsau YCM YBhD] tathā sā HRĀ maraṇāvasthā HRĀ YBhD] maraṇāvasthām YCM jāyate dvipuṭāśritā YBhD] jāyate dvipuṭīsthitā HRĀ, harate dvipuṭāśrayām YCM (em., dvipaṭā L, dvipaḍā N)

Commentary: This verse is taken from the Amaraugha, which uses the alchemical imagery of the Amṛtasiddhi to describe the stilling of Kuṇḍalinī in the central channel. Drawing on HELLWIG 2009: 238–240, MALLINSON AND SZÁNTÓ (2021: 21) note that “In alchemical texts māraṇa (“killing”) involves heating a substance and thereby changing its state, usually through calcination or oxidation, so that it becomes inert. In the Amṛtasiddhi māraṇa and other derivatives of the root mṛ, “die”, are used to denote the stilling or stopping of either the breath or Bindu.” Thus when Kuṇḍalinī is said to be in the state of marāṇa the meaning is that she is stilled. The dvipuṭa or “vessel with two halves” in which this occurs is the same as the Amṛtasiddhi’s saṃpuṭa, which, drawing on HELLWIG (2009: 342), MALLINSON AND SZÁNTÓ (2021: 22) say “consists of two puṭas joined together to form a sealed crucible for heating reagents without evaporation”. In the yoga of the Amṛtasiddhi, the bodily saṃpuṭa is formed by applying locks at the top and bottom of the central channel, i.e. constricting the perineal region and the throat. In the Hatha-pradīpikā it is formed by pressing the perineum with the heel and constricting the throat.

As BIRCH (2019: 971) notes, it is unlikely that later non-Buddhist authors understood marāṇāvasthā and dvipuṭa according to the alchemical metaphors of the Amṛtasiddhi. Later commentators take dvipuṭa as the two nostrils (e.g., Yuktabhavadeva 7.187, dvināsāpuṭa); the iḍā and piṅgalā channels (e.g., Jyotsnā 3.27, puṭayor dvayam iḍāpiṅgalayor yugmam); or the in and out flows of the breath (e.g., Yogaprakāśikā 5.16–17, vāyor bahirnirgamanam antaḥpraveśa iti yat puṭadvayam tam). How these commentators understood asau māraṇāvasthā is less clear. Brahmānanda seems to take it as the death of prāṇa, or in other words, the absence of the breath, in the two nostrils (marāṇāvasthā jāyate kuṇḍalibodhe sati susumnāyām praviṣṭe prāṇe dvayor puṭayor prāṇaviyogāt). Bhavadeva thought that Kuṇḍalinī, along with prāṇa and apāna, remains in the two nostrils while the breath is being held (evaṃ vāyudhāraṇāyām kriyamāṇāyām vyākulā bhūtā kuṇḍalinī apānaprāṇābhyām saha nāsāpuṭadvayāśritā bhavati). Others, such as Śivānanda and Bālakṛṣṇa, favour the reading tadā sā marāṇāvasthām harate dvipuṭāśritām (or dvipuṭāśrayām), which is present in group γ and δ manuscripts of the Hatha-pradīpikā. Bālakṛṣṇa understands this to mean that the great seal destroys death (marāṇāvasthām harate mahāmudreti bhāvah) but it could also mean that the awakened Kuṇḍalinī destroys death, which is usually dependent on the in and out breaths.

The form rjvibhūtā is non-Pāṇinian (it should be rjūbhūtā) but all witnesses have rjvī or variants thereof. α₁ has rjvī bhūtvā which is correct morphologically, but it does not make sense with bhavet in the next pāda and may be an attempt at correction by the scribe.

3.13

Translation: [The yogi] should then exhale very slowly, not quickly. This is the great seal revealed by the great Siddhas.

Testimonia:

Yuktabhavadēva 181 (attrib. HP)

pradarśitā] pradṛśyate YBhD

3.14

Translation: Problems such as the great afflictions [and] death and so forth dissolve, and that is why the most wise call it the ‘great seal.’

Sources:

Amaraugha 22

mahākṣeśādayo doṣā A] mahārogā mahākṣeśā Av.l. jīryante Av.l.] bhidyante A

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 72v (attrib. Skandapurāṇa), Yuktabhavadēva 7.182 (attrib. HP) mahākṣeśādayo] mahākṣeśa yato YCM YBhD tenaiva YCM] tām eva YBhD

Commentary: This verse appears to be explaining the name of mahāmudrā through assonance with mahākṣeśādayo, doṣā and maraṇādayaḥ in the first line.

3.15

Translation: After practising on the lunar side of the body, the yogi should then practise on the solar side. [The yogi] should finish practising the seal when the count is even.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 60

Testimonia:

Yuktabhavadēva 7.183 (attrib. HP)

candrāṅge tu] candrāṅgena YBhD sūryāṅge punar abhyaset] sūryāṅgenābhyaset tataḥ YBhD

Commentary: The terms candrāṅga and sūryāṅga are unusual and not used in other yoga texts outside the context of mahāmudrā. In Jyotsnā 3.15, Brahmānanda glosses candrāṅga as vāmāṅga (‘the left side of the body’) and sūryāṅga as dakṣāṅga (‘the right side of the body’) and goes on to explain the sequence of practice as follows:

atrāyaṃ kramah/ ākuñcitavāmapādapārṣṇiṃ yonisthāne saṃyojya prasāritadakṣiṇapādāṅguṣṭham ākuñcitatarjanībhyāṃ gṛhitvābhyāso vāmāṅge 'bhyāsaḥ/ asminn abhyāse pūrito vāyur vāmāṅge tiṣṭhati/ ākuñcitadakṣapādapārṣṇiṃ yonisthāne saṃyojya prasāritavāmapādapādāṅguṣṭham ākuñcitatarjanībhyāṃ grhītvābhyāso dakṣāṅge 'bhyāsaḥ/ asminn abhyāse pūrito vāyur dakṣāṅge tiṣṭhati/

This is the sequence in the [practice]. Joining the heel of the bent left leg with the region of the perineum and holding the big toe of the extended right leg with index fingers curled [around it] is the practice, that is, the practice on the left side of the body (vāmāṅga). In this practice, the inhaled breath remains on the left side of the body. Joining the heel of the bent right leg with the region of the perineum and holding the big toe of the extended left leg with index fingers curled [around it] is the practice, that is, the practice on the right side of the body. In this practice, the inhaled breath remains on the right side of the body.

3.16

Translation: [For the yogi who practises thus] there is no wholesome or unwholesome [food], and all flavours without exception become flavourless. Even terrible poison, when consumed, is digested like nectar.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 61

jīryate VMv.l.] jīryati VM, jāyate VMv.l.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.40, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 73r (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadēva 7.184 (attrib. HP)

rasāḥ sarve 'pi nīrasāḥ HRĀ YCM] sarasaṃ nīrasaṃ ca vā YBhD

jīryate HRĀ] jīryati YCM YBhD

3.17

Translation: Diseases such as consumption, skin afflictions, constipation, swelling and indigestion disappear for [the yogi] who practises the great seal.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 62

purogamāḥ] jvaravyathāḥ VM

tasya doṣāḥ VM] sarvarogāḥ VMv.l., rogās tasya VMv.l.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.41, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 73r (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadēva 7.185 (attrib. HP)

tasya doṣāḥ YCM] doṣāḥ sarve HRĀ, tasya rogāḥ YBhD

tu HRĀ YBhD] ca YCM

3.18

Translation: This great seal which brings about the great siddhi for men has been taught. It should be carefully kept secret [and] not be given to all and sundry.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 63

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.42, Yuktabhavadēva 7.186 (attrib. HP) mahāsiddhikarī nṛṇām YBhD] jarāmṛtyuvinaśinī HRĀ

Commentary: Two readings of the second quarter are well-attested: jarāmṛtyuvināśinī (α_1 etc.) and mahāsiddhikarī nṛṇām (α_3 etc.). While the first reading is possible, the play on mahāsiddhi and mahāmudrā seems more likely original, as seen in the source text, the Vivekamārtaṇḍa (without significant variants).

In Jyotsnā 3.18, Brahmānanda understands mahāsiddhi as referring to ‘great siddhis,’ but in other works it can mean liberation (MALLINSON 2012b).

3.19 heading

Translation: Now, the great lock (mahābandha):

3.19

Translation: [The yogi] should place the heel of the left foot on the perineal region. And he should put the right foot on the left thigh, [...]

Sources:

19ab = Dattātreyayogaśāstra 132cd (in the section on mahāmudrā)

19cd. Cf. Vivekamārtaṇḍa 8a (not anuṣṭubh) vāmorūpari dakṣiṇāṇ ca caraṇaṃ saṃsthāpya

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.43, Yogalakṣanāvalī f. 31v (attrib. HP), Yogacintāmaṇi f. 73r (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadēva 7.190 (attrib. HP) pārṣṇīm vāmasya pādasya HRĀ YCM] vāmāṅghripārṣṇibhāgena YLĀ, pārṣṇivāmasya pādasya YBhD yonisthāne niyojayet HRĀ YCM YBhD] yonisthānaṃ nipīdayet YLĀ

Commentary: The seated position for mahābandha described in this verse is not in the Amṛtasiddhi (chapter 12) or Amaraugha (25cd–27). The Amṛtasiddhi instructs the same position for mahāmudrā and mahābandha, and the Amaraugha does not comment on the posture of mahābandha, implying that its posture is the same as mahāmudrā.

3.20

Translation: [...] inhale through the mouth, firmly put the chin on the chest, contract the perineum and fix the mind in the centre.

Sources:

Amaraugha 24

hṛdaye cibukaṃ] cibukaṃ hṛdaye A nibhṛtya A] nibhṛtaṃ Av.l.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.44, Yogalakṣanāvalī f. 31v (attrib. HP), Yogacintāmaṇi f. 73v (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadēva 7.191 (attrib. HP) pūrayitvā mukhe YCM] pūrayen mukhato HRĀ, pūrayitvā tato YLĀ, YBhD dṛḍham HRĀ YLĀ YBhD] tathā YCM nibhṛtya HRĀ] niṣpīḍya HRĀv.l., niḥpīḍya YLĀ YCM, niḥkṣipya YBhD

Commentary: The referent of madhye is uncertain. The verse is derived from the Amaraugha, and the Amṛtasiddhi makes no mention of a place to focus the mind in its treatment of mahābandha (it does however instruct the yogi to place the mind at the catuspatha in its teachings on mahāmudrā). Bhavadēvamiśra (Yuktabhavadēva 7.196), Brahmānanda (Ĵyotsnā 3.20) and Bālakṛṣṇa (Yogamārgapradīpa 5.24) take it to mean the central channel. It could also plausibly mean the region between the chest and perineum, or perhaps the place between the eyebrows. At 3.23 this practice is said to make the mind reach Kedāra, which is sometimes located between the eyebrows (see MALLINSON 2007: 214 n. 285; BIRCH 2019: 967 n. 57).

3.21

Translation: And he should exhale very gently. This is called the Great Lock.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.44cd

eva] evaṃ HRĀ

Commentary: This portion of the description of mahābandha has undergone various revisions in the manuscript groups. The shortest version appears in α_1 , α_2 and α_3 , as well as the δ group and the Haṭharatnāvalī, all of which omit verses 3.21*2 and 3.22*1cd. We have adopted the α version, as it seems that 3.21–22 were reworked in a major redaction of the whole work (for further discussion, see the introduction p. 75).

3.21*1

Translation: [The yogi] should hold the breath as long as possible and exhale slowly. And having practised it on the left side, he should practise it on the right side.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 62cd (padmāsana), 134cd (mahāmudrā) yathāśaktiā] yathāśakti DYŚ anilaṃ] iḍayā DYŚ

 savyāṅge ca] vāmāṅgena DYŚ dakṣiṇāṅge ca] dakṣiṇāṅgena DYŚ

Testimonia:

Yuktabhavadēva 7.192ab (attrib. HP) yathāśaktiā] yathāśakti YBhD śanaiḥ] sudhiḥ YBhD

3.21*2

Translation: With regard to this [practice] some are of the opinion that [the yogi] should leave out the throat lock, saying that he should lift up the opening at the uvula with the tongue instead.

Sources:

Cf. Vivekamārtaṇḍa 126ab

sampīḍya rasanāgreṇa rājadantabīlaṃ mahat/

Cf. Dattātreyayogaśāstra 36

nāsāgre vinyased rājadantamūlaṃ ca jihvayā/uttābhya cibukaṃ vakṣasy āsthāpya pavanam śanaiḥ//

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 73r (attrib. Īśvara), Yuktabhavadēva 7.192cd (attrib. HP) visarjayet] vivarjayet YCM rājadantabīlaṃ] rājadantadvayaṃ YCM YBhD jihvayottambhayed YCM] jihvayonnamayed YBhD

Commentary: This verse expresses an alternative to the application of the chin lock in mahābandha mentioned in 3.20. It is found in all groups except α_1 and α_2 , and the δ group.

We do not find the idea of lifting up the rājadantabīla with the tongue in other works, but Vivekamārtaṇḍa 126ab instructs the yogi to press it with the tip of the tongue and Dattātreyayogaśāstra 36 (found at Haṭhapradīpikā 1.46) instructs the yogi in padmāsana to lift up the ‘root of the uvula’ (rājadantamūla) with the tongue.

This verse occurs in the Yogacintāmaṇi in the middle of a quotation attributed to Īśvara. The other verses of the quoted passage are found in the Śivasamhitā (4.37–42), but the verse in question is not reported in the critical edition of the Śivasamhitā (2009). The verse is absent in another passage on mahābandha that the author of the Yogacintāmaṇi cites and attributes to the Haṭhapradīpikā.

3.22

Translation: After practising this Great Lock, which bestows great success, on the left side of the body, the yogi should practise it on the right side of the body.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.45

amum yogī mahābandham mahāsiddhipradāyakam] ayam yogo mahābandhas sarvasiddhi-pradāyakaḥ HRĀ

3.22*1

Translation: This is truly the great lock: it bestows the great siddhi [and] is adept at loosening the great bond (mahābandha) that is the noose of time.

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 73v (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadēva 7.193 (attrib. HP)

3.23

Translation: And this [lock] initiates an upward flow in all the channels. It brings about a confluence at the Trivenī [and] causes the mind to reach Kedāra.

Sources:

Amaraugha 25

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.46, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 73v (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadēva 7.94 (attrib. HP)

ca HRĀ] tu YCM, hi YBhD

ūrdhvaṃgativibodhakaḥ YBhD] ūrdhvagativibodhakaḥ HRĀ, ūrdhvaṃgamanarodhakaḥ
YCM

Commentary: The reading ūrdhvaṃgativibodhakaḥ ('initiates an upward flow') is found in the source (Amaraugha 25) and all Haṭhapradīpikā witnesses except the Jyotsnā (where the line is found earlier). While the Amaraughaprabodha has the reading ūrdhvaṃgativīśodhanaḥ ('purification of the upward flow'), the Amṛtasiddhi (12.14) states that the chin-lock prevents the upward flow (ūrdhvaṃgatinirodhakaḥ) in all the channels. The Amaraugha is referring to the idea (likely accepted by Svātmārāma) that the root lock creates an upward flow in all the channels that prevents the elements and essences of the body from escaping (cf. Amṛtasiddhi 12.8–10).

Triveṇī and Kedāra are pilgrimage sites, the former at Prayāga where the Gaṅgā, Yamunā and subtle Sarasvatī meet, the latter in the Himālaya, near the source of the Gaṅgā. The bodily triveṇī is located in the navel or heart by earlier Śaiva works (BIRCH 2019: 967). Here it may be the same as the trikūṭa and located between the eyebrows (MALLINSON 2007: 209 n. 259). Brahmānanda, who does not identify a location for Triveṇī, understands Kedāra to be between the eyebrows. In the Khecarīvidyā it is located on the back of the head above the nape of the neck (MALLINSON 2007: 214 n. 285). For other references on the location of Kedāra, see BIRCH 2019: 967 n. 57.

3.24

Translation: Like a beautiful and charming woman without a man, the great seal and the great lock are barren without the great piercing.

Sources:

Amaraugha 26

bandhau niṣphalau vedhavarjitaḥ A] bandho niṣphalo vedhavarjitaḥ Av.l.

Cf. Śivasamhitā 4.47

mahāmudrāmahābandhau niṣphalau vedhavarjitaḥ/tasmād yogī prayatnena karoti tritayaṃ kramāt//

Cf. Amṛtasiddhi 13.3

guṇarūpavatī nārī niṣphalā puruṣaṃ vinā/mahāmudrāmahābandhau vinā vedhena niṣphalau//

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.47, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 73v (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadēva 7.197cd, 197ab (attrib. HP)

Commentary: This verse, which is from the Amaraugha and similar to verses in the Amṛtasiddhi and Śivasamhitā, is stating that the great seal, lock and piercing should be practised together. This can be done as a sequence as shown in this video (© Mark Robberds).

3.25 heading

Translation: Now the great piercing (mahāvedha):

3.25

Translation: While in the great lock, the yogi should inhale, focus his mind and firmly block the flow of the bodily winds by means of the throat seal.

Sources:Cf. Amaraugha 27

punar āsphālayet kaṭyāṃ susthiraṃ kaṇṭhamudrayā/vāyūnāṃ gatim ārudhya kṛtvā pūrakakumbhakau//
 c ārudhya] āvṛtya, āśritya v.l.

Cf. Śivasamhitā 4.43

mahābandhasthito yogī kuṣṣim āpūrya vāyūnā/sphicau saṃtāpayed dhīmān vedho'yaṃ kirtito mayā//

Testimonia:Haṭharatnāvalī 2.48, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 73v (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadēva 7.198 (attrib. HP) mahābandha HRĀ YBhD] mahābandhe YCM ekadhiḥ HRĀ] ekadhā YCM YBhD āvṛtya YCM YBhD] ākṛṣya HRĀ

Commentary: We are not certain of the meaning here of nibhṛtam, which is found in all of the collated witnesses and important testimonia. We have understood it as an adverb with the meaning ‘firmly’ rather than the more usual but here inappropriate ‘secretly’. In the Ĵyotsnā (3.26), Brahmananda glosses it as nīscalām (‘immovably’).

3.26

Translation: With hands even on the ground, he should gently tap the buttocks [on the ground]. The breath enters the vessel of two halves and quickly flashes forth.

Sources:Amaraugha 28ab, 29cd, Dattātreyayogaśāstra 136ab

samahastayugo A] mahābandhasthito DYŚ sphicau saṃtādayec chanaiḥ DYŚ] samapādayugas tathā A samākramya A.v.l.] samākṛṣya A Testimonia:Haṭharatnāvalī 2.51ab, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 73v (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavedēva 7.199 (attrib. HP)

sama HRĀ YCM] nyasta YBhD puṭadvayaṃ YCM] jaṃghādvayaṃ YBhD samākramya YCM] samākṛṣya YBhD satvaram YBhD] madhyagaḥ YCM

Commentary: The term puṭadvaya is referring back to the dvipuṭa mentioned in verse 3.12. On the alchemical meaning and other interpretations by later commentators, see the note to 3.12.

3.27

Translation: And the union of the moon, sun and fire arises, which leads to immortality. The dead state has arisen, so where is the fear of death?

Sources:

Amaraugha 30

saṃbandho] saṃbandham A, saṃbandhāj Av.l., saṃbandhā Av.l. jāyate cāmṛtāya] jānīyād amṛtāya A

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 73v (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadeva 7.200 (attrib. HP) saṃbandho YBhD] sandhānam YCM cāmṛtāya vai] cāmṛtāyate YCM, cāmṛtāya ca YBhD samutpannā YCMv.l.YBhD] samutpannam YCM mrtyubhayaṃ kutaḥ YCM] vāyum virecayet YBhD

Commentary: The α, γ and other groups have saṃbandhāj, which is possible but somewhat awkward (i.e. ‘because of the union of the moon, sun and fire, the state of a dead person, which has arisen, leads to immortality’). The adopted reading saṃbandho, which is supported by ζ₂, Yuktabhavadeva 7.200 and Jyotsnā 3.28, makes better sense but its meaning is not as clear as the formulation in the source text (i.e. Amaraugha 30: °saṃbandham jānīyād amṛtāya).

The compound mṛtāvasthā (‘the dead state’) refers both to a dead person (in the sense that the yogi appears as if dead) and the dead state of the breath when the moon, sun and fire have united. For the alchemical metaphor of mṛtāvasthā (cf. marañāvasthā), see the commentary on 3.12.

In the version found in Jyotsnā 3.28 and ζ₃, η₁, η₂ and the Yuktabhavadeva, the final verse quarter has been rewritten to say that the yogi then exhales the breath (tato vāyum virecayet). This implies that mṛtāvasthā is a breath retention (kumbhaka), which is apparent in Brahmānanda’s explanation:

mṛtasya prāṇaviyuktasyāvasthā mṛtāvasthā samutpannā bhavati, idāpiṅgalayoḥ prāṇasañcārābhāvāt/ tatas tadanantaram vāyum virecayen nāsikāpuṭābhyāṃ śanais tyajet/

The state of death that has arisen is the state of one who has died, [that is,] of one who is devoid of the breath because of the absence of movement of prāṇa in the idā and piṅgalā channels. Then, immediately after that [state], [the yogi] exhales the breath, [that is,] he gradually releases it through the nostrils.

3.28

Translation: Through practice, this great piercing bestows the great siddhi [and] cures wrinkles, grey hair, and trembling. It is used by the best practitioners.

Testimonia:

Cf. Haṭharatnāvalī 2.51cd

ayam eva mahāvedhaḥ siddhido'bhyāsato bhavet//

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 73v (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadeva 7.201 (attrib. HP)

abhyāsān YCM] abhyasto YBhD

Commentary: In the third verse quarter, the reading vedhaghnaḥ ('cures wounds'?) found in α and the other groups, with the exception of δ (vegaghnaḥ), is odd as it does not seem related to the other two symptoms of old age (i.e. wrinkles and grey hair) that this mudrā can cure. Adopting Brahmānanda's otherwise unattested reading, we have understood vedhaghnaḥ to be a mistake for vepaghnaḥ, 'cures trembling', which occurs in some manuscripts in the δ_ω (J_1 , J_3 , N_{16} , N_{18}) and π (N_{12} contaminated) and ζ (J_{14} contaminated) groups, as well as the Yogacintāmaṇi, Yuktabhavadeva, and Jyotsnā. The mistake likely arose from the similarity of dha and pa in Nagari scripts.

3.29

Translation: This triad is a great secret that destroys old and death, increases [the body's] fire and bestows the powers beginning with minimisation.

Sources:

Amaraugha 31

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.52, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 73v (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadeva 7.204 (attrib. HP)

etat trayam HRĀ YCM] bandhatrayam YBhD mahāguhyam HRĀ YBhD] mahāguptam YCM

caiva YCM YBhD] caiva hy HRĀ

3.30

Translation: It is practised eight times a day, every three hours. It always produces a wealth of merit and destroys an ocean of demerit.

Sources:

Amaraugha 32

caitad Av.I.] caiva A sambhāra] sañcaya A

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.49, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 73v (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadeva 7.205 (attrib. HP)

sambhāra YCM YBhD] saṅghāta HRĀ caitat HRĀ] caiva YCM YBhD sambhāvi] sandhāyi HRĀ YCM YBhD

3.31

Translation: It is only for those who have received proper instruction. It is taught that they should [do it] a little in the first stage of the practice [and] that at the beginning they should avoid frequenting fire, women and roads.

Sources:

Amaraugha 33

ādiśet] ācaret A

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 73v (ab only) (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadeva 7.205 (attrib. HP) sādhane YCM] sādhanam YBhD ādiśet] ācaret YBhD

3.32 heading

Translation: Now, the sky-roving [seal] (khecarī):

3.32

Translation: By cutting, moving, and milking, [the yogi] should gradually lengthen the tongue until it touches the middle of the brows. Then the sky-roving [seal] is perfected.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.141 (attrib. HP), Yogacintāmaṇi f. 74r (attrib. HP), Haṭhatattvakau- mudī 14.18 (attrib. HP)

kalām krameṇa pravardhayet] kalām krameṇa vardhayet HRĀ, jihvām saṃvardhayet YCM, krameṇa jihvām pravardhayet HTK sā yāvad bhrūmadhyaṃ sprśati HTK] yāvad iyaṃ bhrūmadhye sprśati HRĀ, sā yāti yāvad bhrūmadhyaṃ sprśati hi HRĀv.l., yāvad iyaṃ bhrūmadhyaṃ sprśati YCM tadā khecarisiddhiḥ YCM HTK] tadāniḥ khecarisiddhiḥ HRĀ

Commentary:

Various versions of this verse have been transmitted in upagīti (γ, δ), gīti (ε), āryā (η₂) and anuṣṭubh (π_ω) metres. We have adopted a version close to α₂, which has a slight metrical fault:

chedanacālanam dohaiḥ kalā kramaṇa pravardhayet tāvat/sā yāvad bhrūmadhyaṃ visati tadāniḥ khecarisiddhiḥ//

The emendation of tadānīm to tadā renders the verse an āryā. The word krameṇa is well attested by manuscripts of the α, ζ, η and π groups, which all have unmetrical or corrupted versions.

It is possible that this verse was originally composed in the upagīti metre, as three other verses in the Haṭhapradīpikā (i.e. 1.60, 4.51 and 4.55), likely composed by the author, are in this metre. If this were the case, the verse may have read kramād vardhayet, which would scan correctly as upagīti. However, this reading is not attested by the manuscripts or testimonia that we have consulted.

The meaning of kalā as ‘tongue’ is not attested in any Sanskrit dictionary but kalā occurs in the sense of the tongue in a subsequent verse of this chapter (cf. 3.34a) and it is glossed by Brahmānanda with jihvā in Jyotsnā 3.33 and 3.37.

Metre: Āryā

3.32*1

Translation:

He should take a very sharp, well-oiled and clean blade resembling a leaf of the Snuhi plant and then cut away a hair’s breadth [of the frenum] with it.

Sources:

Khecarīvidyā 1.46

samucchidet] samucchinet KhV

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.136

samādāya tatas tena] samanāyām tu jihvāyām HRĀ

Commentary: The term snuhī can refer to several species of Euphorbia, which is generally known as spurge. Two common species are Euphorbia antiquorum Linn. (‘triangular’ or ‘oleander’ spurge) or neriifolia Linn. The latter was probably not used in the practice of khecarīmudrā as NADKARNI (1926: 349) describes it as a ‘leafless shrub.’ Although all varieties of Euphorbia are poisonous, the sap, roots and bark have been used in medicines since the time of Caraka and Suśruta (SINGH AND CHUNekar 1999: 459).

3.32*2

Translation: After cutting, he should rub [the cut] with a powder of rock-salt and myrobalan. After seven days he should again cut away a hair’s breadth.

Sources:

Khecarīvidyā 1.47

3.32*3

Translation: [The yogi], regularly applying himself, should thus practise gradually for six months. After six months the binding tendon at the base of the tongue is destroyed.

Sources:

Khecarīvidyā 1.48

3.32*4

Translation: Then, knowing the rules of time and limit, the yogi should gradually pull upwards the tip of [the tongue,] the abode of the goddess of speech, having wrapped it in cloth.

Sources:

Khecarīvidyā 1.49

3.32*5

Translation: It is said that the characteristics of the cloth for wrapping around [the tongue] are that it is a handspan long, four fingerbreadths wide, soft and white.

Sources:

Cf. Gorakṣaśataka 20cd

dvādaśāṅguladairghyaṃ cāmbaraṃ caturaṅgulam

Testimonia:

Yogabīja 81 (South Indian recension), Yogacintāmaṇi f. 74r (attrib. Yogabīja in the context of khecarīmudrā), Haṭhayogasamhitā p. 44 dairghyaṃ YB] dirgha YCM, dirgham HYS

vistāraṃ YCM] vistāre YB HYS

proktaṃ YB YCM] sūkṣmaṃ HYS

āmbara YB HYS] ādhāra YCM

Commentary: One would expect to read caturaṅgulavistāram in the second verse quarter, and the current reading is probably a result of the metre. This verse also occurs at 3.95*2.

3.32*6

Translation: Then, in six months, after repeated drawing out [of the tongue], my dear, it increases [in length to reach upwards] between the eyebrows, obliquely to the ears,

Sources:Khecarīvidyā 1.50

vardheta] sābhyeti KhV

3.32*7

Translation: and downwards it is gradually made to reach the base of the chin. Upwards it easily reaches the hairline [and] sideways the temples, my dear.

Sources:Khecarīvidyā 1.51ab + 1.52ab

adhastāc] adhaś ca KhV

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (c: bha-vipulā)3.32*8

Translation: And then, after the second year, o goddess, it easily covers the top of the aperture of Brahman, o she who is worshipped by the supreme [deity].

Sources:Cf. Khecarīvidyā 1.51cd + 1.53ab saṃvatsarād devi dvitīyād] saṃvatsarāṇām tu tṛtīyād KhV tiṣṭhet paramavandite] tiṣṭhaty amaravandite KhV

3.32*9

Translation: In the manner described by his guru, [every day] for seven days the knower of ātman should rub the base of his palate and remove all impurity.

Sources:Khecarīvidyā 1.45

svatālumūlaṃ saṃghrṣya] tālumūlaṃ samutkṛṣya KhV

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (a: ma-vipulā)3.32*10

Translation: After rubbing there with the tip of his finger, he should insert his tongue. Very gradually it breaks the great adamantite doorway out of the head.

Sources:ab: Khecarīvidyā 1.56cdcd: cf. Khecarīvidyā 1.33cd mastakākhyā mahācaṇḍā śikhivahnika vajrabhṛt//

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (c: ra-vipulā)

3.32*11

Translation: The yogi should practise the mantra (vidyā) that has been taught and is extremely hard to obtain joined with the previously described seed syllable [and] its six limbs with it divided according to the six cakras.

Sources:

Cf. Khecarīvidyā 1.34

pūrvabījayutā vidyā vyākhyātā hy atidurlabhā/ṣaḍaṅgavidyāṃ vakṣyāmi tayā ṣaṭsvaṛabhinnayā//

Commentary: This verse is a reworking (or corruption) of Khecarīvidyā 1.34 which is difficult to make sense of. On the Khecarī mantra see Khecarīvidyā 1.29–44 and the notes thereon in Mallinson's edition.

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (c: ma-vipulā)

3.32*12

Translation: The mind which moves in the eternally blessed void in which all activity has ceased is Khecarī, the bringer of union with Śivahood [and] the remover of the suffering of existence.

Metre: Rathoddhatā

3.32*13

Translation: It is to be brought about very gradually, through practice, o beautiful lady. The body of him who strives [for it] all at once is destroyed.

Sources:

Khecarīvidyā 1.54

krameṇaiva] śanair eva KhV varavarṇini] yugapan na hi KhV yatate] yaś caret KhV

3.32*14

Translation: Therefore [its] practice is to be done very gradually, not all at once, my dear. After practising in this way for three years, one is sure to enter the door of Brahman.

Sources:

Khecarīvidyā 1.55ab + 1.57ab

kāryo 'bhyāso na yugapat priye] kāryam abhyāsaṃ varavarṇini KhV viśeḍ dhruvam] praviśyati KhV

3.32*15

Translation: He who pierces the six cakras, wakes up the snake-goddess situated at the Base, breaks through the great triad of knots which are like a defensive wall in the rear channel [i.e. the Suṣumṇā], then leads the breath to the opening in the head, churns that liṅga sufficiently with his mind and drinks [the amṛta] dripping from the orb of the moon, is liberated, Śiva himself in person.

Commentary: The referent of tat, rendered here as “that” in “that liṅga”, is unclear and may refer to something in a previous verse in an unidentified source text.

Metre: Śārdūlavikrīḍita

3.32*16

Translation: If a man has his tongue constantly up [in the aperture above the palate] and drinks the stream of amṛta with its seven flows, which is delicious, cool, removes trouble and danger [and] wards off hunger and thirst, then steadiness of the body arises, [†]death, disease and misfortune disappear ..., death turns around and goes away[†].

Sources:

Amarauḡhaśāsana 3.1–2

Commentary: The second half of this verse, which is found in the published 10-chapter Hatḡhapradīpikā (5.51), is corrupt.

Metre: Sragdharā

3.32*17

Translation: [If the taste is] sharp it removes disease; bitter it gets rid of skin problems; and [if it is] like ghee the yogi is sure to attain immortality.

<*sc32-17>

Sources:

Cf. Jñānasāra 2.10cd

ghṛtāsavadūpamānās ca hy amaratvaṃ na saṃśayaḥ/

</sc32-17>

3.32*18

Translation: And [if it is] like honey, he can recite lots of scriptures. [†]Sweetmeats and sugary morsels, lots of cooked food[†].

<*sc32-18>

Sources:Cf. Jñānasāra 2.10cd (ab only) madhusvādūpamānās ca śāstrodgīraṇatā bhavet//

Cf. Jñānasāra 2.11 (cd only)mṛṣṭāni khaṇḍakādyāni laḍukāśokavartikāḥ/
evam vārāhy aneke ca kāmadevo vyavasthitah//

</sc32-18>

Commentary: The second half of this verse is related to Jñānasāra 2.11ab but makes no sense on its own. Perhaps the second half of the Jñānasāra verse has dropped out.

3.32*19

Translation: He enjoys himself constantly for an age of the gods, is sure to be exalted, and attains identity with [Brahman], like a silk worm making a cocoon.

3.33

Translation: When the tongue is turned back and inserted into the cavity of the skull and the gaze is between the brows, the sky-roving seal arises.

Sources:Vivekamārtaṇḍa 47Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.138 (attrib. Dattātreyā), Yogacintāmaṇi f. 75r (attrib. Skandapurāṇa), Yuktabhavadeva 7.207 (attrib. HP)

3.34

Translation: If the yogi turns back the tongue and remains [like that] for half an instant, he is instantly freed from disease, death, old age and the like.

Sources:Śivasamhitā 3.91, Jñānasāra 2.6

kalām parāṇmukhīm kṛtvā] rasanām ūrdhvagām kṛtvā ŚS, JS yādhimṛtyu ŚS] vyādhibhis tu JS

Testimonia:Yuktabhavadeva 7.209 (attrib. HP)Cf. Yogacintāmaṇi f. 74r (attrib. HP)

kalām parāṇmukhīm kṛtvā tripathe parivartayet/sā bhavet khecarī mudrā vyomacakraṃ tad ucyate// rasanām ūrdhvagāṃ kṛtvā kṣaṇārdhaṃ yadi tiṣṭhati/viṣayair mucyate yogī vyādhimṛtyujarādibhiḥ//

Commentary: Although 3.34 is absent in α_1 , it is in α_2 and α_3 , and also the γ and η groups. Other manuscripts have an additional line that gives vyomacakra as an alternative name for khecarīmudrā (3.34*1). On the meaning of vyomacakra, see the commentary on X4.49.

3.34*1–2

Translation: [The yogi] should roll back the tongue onto [the junction of] the three pathways. This is khecarīmudrā; it is [also] called the ‘cakra of the void’ (vyomacakra). If the yogi turns the tongue upwards and keeps it there for half a moment, he is instantly freed from disease, death, old age and the like.

3.35

Translation: For the yogi who knows khecarīmudrā there is no disease, death, sleep, hunger, thirst or fainting.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 48

tasya VMv.l.] tandrā VM

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.139 (attrib. Dattātreyā), Yogacintāmaṇi f. 75v (attrib. Dattātreyā), Yuktabhavadēva 7.210 (attrib. HP) kṣudhā tṛṣā HRĀ YCM] tṛṣā kṣudhā YBhD

3.36

Translation: [The yogi] who knows khecarīmudrā is neither afflicted by disease, nor tainted by action, nor tormented by death.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 49

na ca lipyati] lipyate na ca VM

ca kālena] sa kālena VM

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.140 (attrib. Dattātreyā), Yogacintāmaṇi f. 75v (attrib. Skandapurāṇa), Yuktabhavadēva 7.211 (attrib. HP) na ca lipyati] lipyate na ca HRĀ, na ca lipyeta YCM, lipyate na sa YBhD

ca kālena HRĀ] sa kālena YCM YBhD yo mudrāṃ vetti khecarīm HRĀ YCM] yasya mudrāsti khecarī YBhD

Commentary: The unusual passive form lipyati, which is found in α_2 and has been adopted, is widely attested in epic Sanskrit.

3.37

Translation: The mind moves (carati) in space (khe) because the tongue moves (carati) in space (khe). That is why this seal is called Khecari [and] is worshipped by the Siddhas.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 50

tenaiṣā] tenaiṣa VM, teneyam VMv.L
nāma mudrā VM] mudrā sarva VMv.L

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi (attrib. Skandapurāṇa), Yuktabhavadēva 7.212 (attrib. HP)

gatā YCM] yataḥ YBhD tenaiṣā YCM] teneyam YBhD nāma mudrā YCM] mudrā sarva YBhD namaskṛtā YBhD] niṣevitā YCM

3.38

Translation: The yogi who has sealed the cavity above the uvula with khecari does not lose his semen [even if] embraced by an amorous woman.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 51

tasya na VMv.L] na tasya VM kāminyāśleṣitasya VMv.L] kāminyāliṅgitasya VM

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 74v (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadēva 7.213 (attrib. HP)

tasya na] na tasya YCM YBhD kāminyāśleṣitasya] kāminyāliṅgitasya YCM YBhD

3.39

Translation: Even when semen has moved [down] and reached the region of the perineum, it moves upwards having been blocked by the perineal seal (yonimudrā) and struck by the goddess [Kunḍalinī].

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 53

saṃprāpto yonimaṇḍalam] saṃprāptaś ca hutāśanam VM vrajaty VMv.L] gacchaty VM
hataḥ VM] tanaṃ VMv.L, hṛtas VMv.L, kṛte VMv.L, kṛtaḥ VMv.L, tadā VMv.L, gatā VMv.L

nibaddho VM] niruddho VMv.l.

Cf. Śivasamhitā 4.82

svakaṃ binduṃ ca saṃbodhya liṅgacālanam ācāret/
daivāc calati ced ūrdhvaṃ nibaddho yonimudrayā//

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 74v (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadeva 7.278 (attrib. HP) samprāpto yonimaṇḍalam] samprāptaś ca hutāśanam YCM, samprāpte 'pi hutāśanam YBhD

hataḥ śaktyā] hi tacchaktyā YCM, haṭhaḥ śaktyā YBhD nibaddho YBhD] niruddho YCM

Commentary:

The third quarter of this verse has been subjected to much rewriting. Most of the collated manuscripts, including α_2 (α_1 is illegible here and α_3 is missing this verse quarter), have the reading haṭhāt śaktyā. This reading only makes sense if one infers that śaktyā is referring to khecarīmudrā, so that the second line means 'blocked by yonimudrā, semen goes up forcefully by the power [of khecarīmudrā].' The reading hi tacchaktyā of δ_2 (and the Yogacintāmaṇi), appears to be an attempt to render more clearly the meaning 'by the power of khecarī.' Such an interpretation suggests that yonimudrā blocks bindu's downward course and khecarī causes it to go upwards forcefully.

The oldest manuscript of the Vivekamārtaṇḍa (ms. no. 4110) has hataḥ śaktyā, which is attested by three Haṭhapradīpikā manuscripts on lower branches of the stemma (i.e. B_a, C₂ and P₄). The participle hataḥ makes sense of the instrumental śaktyā, rendering the meaning 'struck by Kuṇḍalinī.'

Alternatively, the word hataḥ (as well as the other variants kṛtaḥ, kṛte, and even haṭhāt) may derive from hṛtaḥ, which is attested by manuscripts of the Jyotsnā. The reading hṛtaḥ śaktyā renders the verse as saying that semen goes up, carried by Kuṇḍalinī.

In Jyotsnā 3.43, Brahmānanda explains yonimudrā as essentially the contraction of the penis (yonimudrayā meḍhrākuñcanarūpayā). He may have had in mind the practice of contracting and drawing the urethra upwards, which is described below in the section on vajrolimudrā (Haṭhapradīpikā 3.82). The author of the Yogaprakāśikā (5.66) states that yonimudrā is well known in treatises on mantra (yonimudrayeti mantrasāstraprasiddhayety arthaḥ/ prasidhyayety ed.). This is consistent with the Śivasamhitā's discussion of yonimudrā (4.2, 5.12), where it is described as activating the perineum (yoni) by contracting it in order to bring about success in mantra repetition. Later compendiums on yoga reiterate the role of yonimudrā in mantra practice (e.g., the Yogacintāmaṇi f. 65r, citing the Pārameś- varatantra, and Haṭhatattvakaumudī 33.12). The Haṭhayogasaṃhitā (43–48) teaches a different version of yonimudrā in its repertoire of twenty-five mudrās. In this work, yonimudrā is supposed to awaken Kuṇḍalinī and involves sitting in śiḍdhāsana, blocking the ears, eyes, nose and mouth with the thumbs, index, middle and ring fingers respectively, uniting prāṇa and apāna, meditating on the six cakras, and repeating the mantra hum haṃsa.

3.39*1

Translation:

Commentary: Manuscripts of the main groups, including α, γ and ε, contain an additional line after 3.39 that is largely incoherent, aside from indicating that the tongue is in the cavity of the skull and that there is a mudrā for uniting the kalās (kapālakuhare jihvā kalāsandhānamudrayā). This line likely derives from a marginal note, the first half of which was probably explaining ūrdhvajihvaḥ in the next verse. The compound kalāsamdhānamudrayā may have been added as some form of dittography or as a gloss on yonimudrā, which is not described elsewhere in the text. In a slightly modified form, this line appears in a verse in the six-chapter version of the Haṭhapradīpikā (f. 112r–112v):

kapālakuhare jihvā kalāsamdhānavarjitā/brahmarandhragatā nityaṃ tasya siddhir na dūrataḥ// nityaṃ em.] nityaṃ codex • siddhir em.] siddhi codex

3.40

Translation: The knower of yoga who remains with the tongue upwards and drinks Soma certainly conquers death in half a month.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 125

sthito bhūtvā VM] tato bhūtvā VMv.L., sthiram kṛtvā VMv.L., sthiram kṛtvā VMv.L.

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 75v (attrib. Skandapurāṇa), Yuktabhavadēva 7.215 (attrib. HP)

sthito bhūtvā] sthitho bhutvā YCM, sa medhāvī YBhD

3.41

Translation: Poison does not enter the yogi whose body is constantly filled by [nectar from] the digits of the moon, even if he is bitten by Takṣaka.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 130

sarpati VMv.l.] piḍayet VM, piḍyate VMv.l., bādhyate VMv.l.

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 75v (attrib. Skandapurāṇa), Yuktabhavadeva 7.216 (attrib. HP)

tasya na YBhD] taṃ na ca YCM

Commentary: In the context of poison, takṣaka refers to one of the three kings of the snakes (nāga), the other two being Śeṣa and Vāsuki (MANI 1975: 782–783).

3.42

Translation: Just as fire does not leave its fuel nor light a wick in oil, so the embodied person does not leave a body filled by the [nectar from] digits of the moon.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 131

vartim ca VM] vartiva VMv.l., vartti ca VMv.l.

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 74v (attrib. HP)

tailavartim] tailavartī YCM

tathā] nityam YCM

3.43

Translation: I consider he who regularly eats cow flesh and drinks the liquor of the gods to be of good lineage. Others are destroyers of the lineage.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.158, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 74v (attrib. HP)

itare kulaghātakāḥ] anye tu kulaghātakāḥ HRĀ, netarān kulaghātakān YCM

3.44

Translation: By the word ‘cow’ is meant the tongue, for its insertion into the palate is the eating of cow’s flesh, which destroys great sin.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.157, Yogacintāmaṇi ff. 74v–75r (attrib. HP)

3.45

Translation: The essence produced by the fire caused by the insertion of the tongue which flows from the moon is the liquor of the gods.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.159, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 75r (attrib. HP)

vahninotpāditaḥ YCM] vahninotthāpitā HRĀ

3.46

Translation: With his face turned upwards and his tongue fixed in the aperture [of the skull], [the yogi] should visualise as the supreme śakti [the nectar] that is forcibly obtained from the breath having dripped from the head into the sixteen petals of the lotus. And the yogi who drinks the gushing nectar, the pure fluid [surging] from the [moon's] digits in waves, is free of disease, has a body as soft as lotus fibre, and lives a long time.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 118

padmapattra] patrapadma VM niyāmya VM] nidhāya VM*v.l.*, vidhāya VM*v.l.*
 cintayet VM] cālayet VM*v.l.*
 utkallolalakājalāṇ VM] utkallolalakālākalaṇ VM*v.l.*, utkallolajalākulaṇ VM*v.l.*, utkallolajalāmṛtaṇ VM*v.l.*, tat kallolalakājalāṇ VM*v.l.*, tat kallolajalākulaṇ VM*v.l.*
 ca vimalaṇ VM] suvimalaṇ VM*v.l.*
 dhārāmṛtaṇ] jivākulaṇ VM*v.l.*, jihvākulaṇ VM*v.l.*, dhārājalaṇ VM*v.l.*
 vapur VM*v.l.*] tanur VM

Testimonia:

Cf. Haṭharatnāvalī 2.150

utkallolalakālāmṛtaṇ ca vimalaṇ dhārāmṛtaṇ yaḥ pibet/nirdoṣaḥ sa mṛnālakomalatanur yogī ciraṇ jīvati//

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 75r (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadeva 7.217 (attrib. Gorakṣanātha), Haṭhatattvakau-mudī 14.24 (attrib. HP) mūrdhnaḥ YCM YBhD] ūrdhvaṇ HTK, mūrdhvaṇ HTK*v.l.*

 padmapattra YCM] patrapadma YBhD HTK vivare YCM YBhD] kuhare HTK cintayet YBhD] cintayan YCM YBhD*v.l.*HTK utkallola HTK] tatcallola YCM YBhD ca vimalaṇ YCM] suvimalaṇ YBhD HTK dhārāmṛtaṇ YBhD HTK] jihvākulaṇ YCM vapur HTK] tanur YCM YBhD ciraṇ YCM HTK] paraṇ YBhD

Commentary: The meaning of prāṇāt ('from the breath') in the first verse quarter is not easy to understand without the context of this verse in the source text, the Vivekamārtaṇḍa. In the verse preceding this one in the Vivekamārtaṇḍa (117), the breath, on reaching the "great lotus", is said to turn into nectar (amṛta). In Īyotsnā 3.51, Brahmānanda notes that there is a variant prāṇaiḥ ('by means of the breaths'), which is easier to understand than prāṇāt. He nonetheless accepts prāṇāt and understands it as being the means by which the nectar is obtained (prāṇāt sādhanabhūtād avāptam). He also understands the sixteen-petalled lotus to be the lotus in the throat, into which the nectar drips.

Metre: Śārdūlavikrīḍita

3.47

Translation: If the tongue, while oozing nectar and constantly kissing the tip of the uvula, is salty, pungent, like milk or the same as honey and ghee, diseases are eliminated for [the yogi], he stops ageing, can recite treatises and scriptures, attains immortality together with the eightfold powers, and attracts Siddha women.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 128

rasasyandini VM] rāsapandani VMv.l., rāsāsvādinī VMv.l.
 jarāntakaraṇaṃ VMv.l.] jaropāśamaṇaṃ VM, jarāpaharaṇaṃ VMv.l.
 odīraṇaṃ VM] odgīraṇaṃ VMv.l., occāraṇaṃ VMv.l.
 guṇavat] guṇitaṃ VM

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 75r (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadēva 7.218 (attrib. Gorakṣanātha), Haṭhatattvakau- mudī 14.25 (attrib. HP)

anīśaṃ YCM YBhD] anīlaṃ HTK kaṭukātha] kaṭukāmla YCM YBhD HTK sadṛśā] sadṛśaṃ YCM, sadṛśi YBhD, sadṛśāṃ HTK tulyāthavā YBhD] tulyaṃ yadā YCM, tulyā tathā HTK jarāntakaraṇaṃ YCM HTK] jarāmbutaraṇaṃ YBhD odgīraṇaṃ YBhD HTK] oddhāraṇaṃ YCM amaratvaṃ YBhD HTK] iha siddhir YCM guṇavat HTK] guṇitā YCM, guṇitaṃ YBhD

Metre: Śārdūlavikrīḍita

3.48

Translation: There is one seed [syllable], which contains creation, one mudrā, khecarī, one god, the unsupported, and one state, beyond mind.

Sources:

Cf. Timirodghāṭana 5.14c–15b (NGMPP A35/3)

ekaṃ sṛṣṭimayaṃ bījaṃ ekā mudrā tu khecarī/dvāv etau jñāyate yena so pi śāntapade sthitam//

Cf. Quotation by Jayaratha ad Tantrāloka 32.63, introduced with yad āgamaḥ

ekaṃ sṛṣṭimayaṃ bījaṃ ekā mudrā ca khecarī/dvāv ekaṃ yo vijānāti sa vai pūjyaḥ kulāgame//

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 4.28, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 75r (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadeva 7.219 (attrib. Gorakṣanātha)

3.48*1

Translation: That which enters the aperture into the underworld, which exists at the base of Meru, the wise [yogi] says that is the truth, the source of [all] rivers. [Likewise,] the essence of the body flows from the moon. Because of that, people die. One should dam that [essence] with the earth that is the good mudrā. Otherwise, there is no bodily perfection.

Commentary: See 4.9.

Metre: Mandākrāntā

3.49 heading

Translation: The root lock (mūlabandha):

3.49

Translation: When [the yogi] presses the perineum with part of the heel, clenches the anus and draws up apāna, it is called the root lock.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 42

iṣyate] ucyate VM

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.58, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 76r (attrib. HP)

iṣyate] ucyate HRĀ YCM

3.50

Translation: It forces the downward-moving apāna breath to move upwards by contraction [of the anus]. Yogis call that the root lock.

Sources:

Gorakṣaśataka 53

adhogatiṃ GŚ] adhogataṃ GŚv.l.

ākuñcana taṃ GŚ] ākuñcane ca tat GŚv.l.

mūlabandhaṃ hi yoginaḥ] mūlabandhaṃ tu yoginaḥ GŚ, mūlabandho yam ucyate GŚv.l.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.59, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 76r (attrib. HP)

adhogatim HRĀ] adhogatam YCM vai ūrdhvagaṃ HRĀ] ca tad ūrdhvaṃ YCM balāt HRĀ] haṭhāt YCM hi HRĀ] tu YCM

3.51

Translation: [The yogi] should press his anus with his heel and forcefully contract the [apāna] wind over and over again so that the breath goes upwards.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 144

vāyum DYŚv.l.] yonim (em.)

Cf. Śārngadharapaddhati 4416

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.60, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 76r (attrib. Yogabīja), Yogabīja 103 (south-Indian recension)

tu YCM, YB] ca HRĀ

Commentary: The instruction to ‘contract the wind’ (vāyum ākuñcayet) is odd (especially with samīraṇaḥ in the fourth pāda) and not found in other texts. Mallinson has adopted yonim for vāyum (cf. Haṭhapradīpikā 3.49b) in his edition of this verse in its source text, the Dattātreyayogaśāstra, which is not found in the manuscripts of that text but is in the Haṭhapradīpikā’s ḍ manuscripts. Another possibility is that vāyum is a corruption of pāyum, ‘anus’.

In the context of the root lock, vāyum ākuñcayet can be understood as an instruction to contract apānavāyu, which is mentioned in the previous verse (3.50a). Instructions to contract apānavāyu are found in other yoga texts, such as Yogatārāvalī 7b (ākuñcanaiḥ śaśvad apānavāyoh), Śivasamhitā 4.84cd (apānavāyum ākuñcya balād...), Śivayogapradīpikā 2.53ab (athordhvamadhyasthirabandhanābhyām ākuñcanād ūrdhvam apānavāyoh) and Yuktabhavadēva 7.297 (ādhārakamale sup-tām cālayet kuṇḍalīm dṛḍhām/ apānavāyum ākr̥ṣya balād ākuñcya buddhimān). In Jyotsnā 3.63, Brahmānanda understands vāyu in this verse as apāna when he says that ‘one should contract the wind, apāna’ (vāyum apānam ākuñcayed), which he explains as, ‘one should pull it by contractions of the anus’ (gudasyākuñcanenākaraṣayet). In the same vein, Bhavadevamiśra glosses ‘pulling apāna’ (apānākaraṣaṇam) as ‘contracting the anus’ (gudākuñcanam), when commenting on ‘having pulled apānavāyu and forcefully contracted it ...’ (apānavāyum ākr̥ṣya balād ākuñcya...) in Yuktabhavadēva 297 and 301.

3.52

Translation: When prāṇa and apāna [and] nāda and bindu become united by means of the root lock they are sure to bestow complete success in yoga.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 145

gatvā yogasya DYŚ] gacchato yoga DYŚv.l. yacchato DYŚ] gacchato DYŚv.l., kurute DYŚv.l., gachate DYŚv.l.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.61, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 76r (attrib. Yogabīja)

gatvā yogasya saṃsiddhiṃ YCM] gatau tadā yogasiddhiṃ HRĀ yacchato nātra] gacchato nātra YCM, prāpnoty eva na HRĀ

Commentary: Since the term nāda usually means ‘internal sound’ in Haṭha and Rājayoga texts, it is possible that bindu here was understood by some to have the tantric connotations of sonic and visual foci (MALLINSON 2007: 219 n. 325) or two levels of sonic emanation in mantroccāra, where nāda is an unvoiced sound and bindu is the slightly coarser sound of inner murmuring (see Tāntrikābhīdhānakośa vol. 3: 278–279). However, there is a passage in the Amaraughā (10–12) where nāda and bindu are paired and it is clear that bindu means generative fluid.

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (a: ra-vipulā)

3.53

Translation: Prāṇa and apāna unite, urine and faeces diminish, [and] even an old man becomes young as a result of the continuous application of the root lock.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 41

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.62

Commentary: The diminishing of urine and faeces as a result of success in yoga is mentioned in the Amanaska (1.50c) and Dattātreyayogaśāstra (80a).

3.54

Translation: When apāna has turned upwards and reached the orb of fire, then the flame of the fire, fanned by the wind, grows tall.

Sources:

Gorakṣaśataka 54

maṇḍalam GŚ (em. from HP)] maṇḍale GŚv.l. tadānalaśikhā] tato 'nalaśikhā GŚ

Testimonia:Haṭharatnāvalī 2.63, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 76r (attrib. Yogabīja) samprāpte YCM] prayāte HRĀ maṇḍalam] maṇḍale HRĀ YCM tadānalaśikhā dirghā] tathānalaśikhādiptir HRĀ, tathānalaśikhā dirghā YCM vardhate vāyunāhatā YCM] vāyunā preritā yathā HRĀ

3.55

Translation: As a result, fire and apāna reach prāṇa, which is hot by nature. Then [prāṇa] makes the fire in the body extremely hot.

Sources:Gorakṣaśataka 55

pradiptas tu] pradiptena GŚ dehajas GŚ] dehagas GŚv.l.
 tadā] tathā GŚ

Testimonia:Haṭharatnāvalī 2.64, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 76r–76v (attrib. Yogabīja)

tato yātau YCM] yātāyātau HRĀ prāṇam uṣṇasvarūpakam] mūlarūpasvarūpakau HRĀ, prāṇam uktasvarūpakau YCM tenātyanta YCM] tenābhyantaḥ HRĀ tadā] tathā HRĀ YCM

Commentary: The second verse quarter has been rewritten in α_1 and α_2 as prāṇamūla-svarūpakam, which is similar to η_1 (prāṇamūlasvarūpakau) and the Haṭharatnāvalī (mūlarūpasvarūpakau). It is likely that mūla arose as a misreading of uṣṇa. References to prāṇa being hot by nature (and apāna being cold) occur in other works, such as the Mokṣopāya (6.85.111–112) and Haṭhatattvakaumudī (4.14, 41.2). The commentators Bālakṛṣṇa (Yogaprakāśikā 5.85) and Brahmānanda (Jyotsnā 3.67) accept the idea that prāṇa is hot by nature.

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (a: ra-vipulā)

3.56

Translation: Heated by that [blaze], the sleeping Kuṇḍalinī wakes up. Like a snake struck by a stick, she hisses and becomes straight.

Sources:Gorakṣaśataka 56Testimonia:Haṭharatnāvalī* 2.65ab, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 76v (attrib. Yogabīja)

samtaptā] satatam YCM samprabudhyate] samprabodhyate YCM daṇḍāhatā HRĀ] daṇḍāhata YCM niśvasya HRĀv.l.] niścitaṃ HRĀ YCM vrajet YCM] iyāt HRĀ

3.57

Translation: Then, like [a snake] that has entered a hole, she goes into the channel of Brahman. So yogis should regularly practise the root lock.

Sources:

Gorakṣaśataka 57

bilaṃ] bile GŚ, bila GŚv.l., bilaṃ GŚv.l. praviṣṭeva] praviṣṭe ca tato GŚ, praveśato yatra GŚv.l.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.65c–f, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 76v (attrib. Yogabīja)

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (a: bha-vipulā; c: ra-vipulā)

3.58 heading

Translation: Now the Uḍḍiṃyaṇa lock:

3.58

Translation: Yogis say that this [lock] is called Uḍḍiṃyaṇa because the breath flies up (uḍḍiṃyate) into Suṣuṃṇā when bound by it.

Sources:

Gorakṣaśataka 58c–59b

baddho GŚ (em. from HP)] vajro GŚv.l., bandho GŚv.l.
yataḥ GŚ] tataḥ GŚv.l.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.53, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 76v (attrib. Yogabīja)

3.59

Translation: Because the great bird tirelessly flies up (uḍyāṇaṃ kurute), [this lock] is [called] ‘flying up’ (uḍḍiṃyāṇaṃ). In it, the [root] lock is applied.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 43

aviśrāntaṃ (em.)] aviśrānta GŚv.l., aviśrānto GŚv.l.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.54, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 76v (attrib. Yogabīja)

uḍyāṇaṃ] uḍḍiṃaṃ HRĀ YCM tatra bandho vidhiyate] tatra bandho 'bhidhiyate HRĀ, mūlabandho 'bhidhiyate YCM

Commentary: In the Vivekamārtaṇḍa this verse is preceded by a passage on mūlabandha, so the likely meaning of the fourth verse quarter is that (mūla)bandha is to be performed in this practice. The ḍ group of the Haṭhapradīpikā witnesses has ‘the root [lock] is applied’ (mūlaṃ vidhīyate), which appears to be an attempt to clarify the meaning of the original verse.

The word uḍyāṇaṃ in the first pāda is attested in manuscripts of the Vivekamārtaṇḍa, the source of this verse, and two manuscripts of the α group. This spelling is attested in several vernacular works (e.g., Aṣṭāṅgayoga of Caraṇadāsa 144, 275, 307–8, Joḡapradīpyaka 588, 635, 686 etc.), as well as other Sanskrit yoga texts (e.g., Yogātārāvalī 6, Dhyānabindūpaniṣat 75 etc.). Other witnesses, including the Jyotsnā, have uḍḍinaṃ, the usual form for the verbal noun from uḍ-ḍi.

3.60

Translation: [The yogi] should perform a rearward and upward stretching of the navel into the abdomen. That is the uḍḍiyāṇa lock, a lion to the elephant of death.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 44, Śivasamhitā 4.73

paścimaṃ SŚ] paścime VM
ca VM] tu ŚŚ
uḍḍiyāṇo hy asau] uḍḍiyāno hy asau VM, uḍyānākhyo 'tra ŚŚ

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.55, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 76v (attrib. Yogabīja)

tāṇaṃ] tānaṃ HRĀ YCM ca kārayet] ca dhārayet HRĀ, samācāret YCM uḍḍiyāṇo] uḍḍiyāno HRĀ YCM

Commentary: The spelling tāṇa (where many witnesses have tāna) reflects vernacular pronunciation (see e.g., Molesworth 1857 s.v. tāṇa).

3.61

Translation: Uḍḍiyāṇa is easy, but it is always taught by a guru. Even an old person becomes young if they practise it tirelessly.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 141c–142b

guruṇā DYŚ] guṇaughāt DYŚv.l.

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 76v (attrib. Yogabīja)

sadā] yathā YCM abhyaset astatandras] abhyaset tad atandras YCM taruṇo bhavet] taruṇāyate YCM

Cf. Haṭharatnāvalī 2.56

guruṇā sahajaṃ proktaṃ vṛddho'pi taruṇo bhavet/bāhyoḍyāṇaṃ ca kurute bāhyālaṅkāravardhanam//

Commentary:

We have understood the first line to mean that even though the basics of the practice of uḍḍiyāṇa are easy, it still needs to be taught by the guru. Witnesses of the γ and δ groups read yathā for sadā, perhaps as a deliberate substitution of the more difficult sadā, making the verse mean that uḍḍiyāṇa is easy in the way that is taught by the guru.

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (a: na-vipulā)

3.62

Translation: [The yogi] should carefully stretch [the region of the abdomen] above and below the navel. If he practises [like this] for six months, he is sure to conquer death.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 142c–143b

adhaś cāpi DYŚ v.l.] ataḥ paścāt DYŚ tānaṃ] tānaṃ DYŚ
abhyasan] abhyasen DYŚ

Cf. Śivasamhitā 4.72

nābher ūrdhvaṃ adhaś cāpi tānaṃ paścimam ācaret/uḍyānabandha eṣaḥ syāt sarvaduḥkhaughanāśanaḥ//

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.57, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 76v (attrib. Yogabīja)

adhaś cāpi] adho vāpi HRĀ YCM tānaṃ] tānaṃ HRĀ YCM abhyasan] abhyasen HRĀ YCM

Cf. Yuktabhavadēva f. 76v (attrib. Śivayoga)

nābher ūrdhvaṃ adhaś cāpi tānaṃ nirbharam ācaret/uḍḍiyāno hy ayaṃ bandhaḥ sarvaduḥkhaughanāśanaḥ//

3.63

Translation: Sitting in vajrāsana, [the yogi] should hold his feet firmly with his hands near the region of the ankles and press the bulb (kanda) there.

Sources:

Gorakṣaśataka 59c–60b

pādaṁ GŚv.l.] jānū (em.), jānu GŚv.l., prādaṁ GŚv.l.

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 76v (attrib. HP)

kandaṁ tatra] udaraṁ tat YCM

Commentary: In the Haṭhapradīpikā this verse seems to instruct the yogi to press the bulb (kanda) with the feet while holding them with the hands. The adopted reading of the source text, the Gorakṣaśataka, which is only found in witness T (and there in the singular jānu, which has been emended to the dual jānū in Mallinson's edition) says that it is the knees that are to be held, which would still allow for the feet to press the bulb. In the Yuktabhavadēva (7.224), Bhavadēvamīśra says that the bulb is near the navel and the legs are held near the ankles, suggesting that the bulb is pressed by using the hands to pull the feet into the lower abdomen.

Yuktabhavadēva 7.224 (commenting on uḍḍiyāṇabandha)

ḍṛḍham āsanaṁ baddhvā gulphadeśasamīpe karābhyāṁ pādaṁ datvā nābhisamīpasthaṁ kandaṁ pīḍayann udare paścimatāṇaṁ tathā kuryād yathā vāyuh kuṁṣisandhiṁ na gacchaty evam uḍḍiyāṇabandho jarāmṛ-tyuvinaśanaḥ sampadyate//

Holding the ankles with the hands and pressing the kanda with the feet is also the view of Brahmānanda (Jyotsnā 3.114), who follows the Yogayājñavalkya (4.14, 4.16) in thinking that the place of the kanda is nine fingerbreadths above the middle of the body, which is two fingerbreadths above the anus (Jyotsnā 3.113).

In the Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā (f. 36r), Sundaradeva explains that the yogi presses the kanda in the navel by performing uḍḍiyāṇabandha, along with the root and chin locks, at the end of kumbhaka and the beginning of exhalation. It is thus the backward stretch in the abdomen (udare paścimatāṇa) that presses the kanda in the navel.

Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā f. 36r

tathā cokaṁ haṭhapradīpikāyām/sati vajrāsane pādaṁ karābhyāṁ dhārayed ḍṛḍham/gulphadeśasamīpe ca kandaṁ tatra nipīḍayet// [...]
siddhāsane sthitvā hastābhyāṁ pādaṁ gulphapradeśasamīpe ḍṛḍham dhṛtvā tunde nālotthānaṁ sādhu vidhāya samāhitamanasā sudṛḍhamūlabandhajālāndharabandhavatābhyāsinā sādakena recakādaṁ kuṁbhakānte udare paścimatāṇe kriyamāṇe nitarāṁ tadā tatra nābhikan-danipīḍane paścimatāṇena sati nābhikandotthā nāḍaya ūrdhvamukhā vikasitā viralā vimalā asaṁhatā vāyugrahasamarthā bhavanti tadā sakūṁb-hitaḥ prāṇavāyuh śānaiḥ//

3.64

Translation: [The yogi] should very gently stretch back his abdomen, chest and throat in such a way that the breath does not come into contact with the stomach.

Sources:

Gorakṣaśataka 60c–61b

tānam] tānam GŚ

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 76v (attrib. HP), Haṭhsaṅketacandrikā, f. 36r–36v (attrib. HP) paścimaṃ YCM] paścime HSC

tānam] tānam YCM HSC

kārayed dhrdaye gale] kārayec cibukaṃ hr̥di YCM, ku[r]yac ca cibukaṃ hr̥di HSC

tundasaṃdhiṃ] tundasiddhiṃ YCM, kandasam̐dhi[m̐] HSC

Commentary: In 3.64b, the reading gale (‘in the throat’) is very well attested by manuscripts of the source text, the Gorakṣaśataka, and the Hathapradīpikā (including all three α witnesses). Its meaning is not entirely clear to us as the ‘backward stretch’ (paścimaṃ tānam) usually occurs above and below the navel when the uḍḍiyāṇa lock is applied, as stated above in verse 3.60. We have not seen the neck mentioned in this regard in any other premodern work, and the absence of ca suggests that gale may be a corruption. The alternative reading cibukaṃ hr̥di in manuscripts of the Hathapradīpikā on lower branches of the stemma and in the testimonia is a reference to jālandharabandha and appears to be a patch.

It is possible that the practice of uḍḍiyāṇa might affect the throat, as reported by GORE (2005: 144). Drawing on x-ray experiments on uḍḍiyāṇabandha conducted at the Kaivalyadhama Yoga Institute, the article mentions a sub-atmospheric (negative) pressure in visceral cavities, such as the oesophagus and stomach, as a physiological effect of applying uḍḍiyāṇa.

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (a: na-vipulā)

3.65

Translation: Uḍḍiyāṇa is the best of all the locks. When the uḍḍiyāṇa lock is firm, liberation becomes easy.

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 76v (attrib. HP)

uttamo] hy uttamo YCM

uḍḍiyāṇakaḥ] uḍḍiyāṇakaḥ YCM

uḍḍiyāṇe] uḍḍiyāṇe YCM

muktiḥ svābhāviki] mūlaḥ svābhāviko YCM

3.66 heading

Translation: Now the jālandhara lock:

3.66

Translation: [The yogi] should contract the throat and place it firmly [and] deliberately on the chest. This is the lock called jālandhara. It prevents loss of the nectar of immortality.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 138

ṛḍḍham icchayā DYŚv.L] ṛḍḍhayā dhiyā DYŚv.L, cibukaṃ ṛḍḍham DYŚ bandho jālandharākhyo 'yaṃ] jālandharo bandha eṣa DYŚ

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.66, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 77r (attrib. Yogabīja)

ṛḍḍham icchayā YCM] cibukaṃ ṛḍḍham HRĀ amṛtavyayakārakaḥ YCM] jarāmṛtyuvinaśakaḥ HRĀ

Commentary: The reading sthāpayed ṛḍḍham icchayā in the second verse quarter is attested by the manuscripts of the α, δ, η and π groups. It is also well-attested in the transmission of the source text, the Dattātreyayogaśāstra, but in his edition Mallinson has adopted sthāpayed cibukaṃ ṛḍḍham on semantic grounds. This reading is found in two of his favoured manuscripts but this is one of the very few instances where he reads against his stemmatic hypothesis. He puts this down to contamination in the transmission. Our sources, in particular the manuscripts of the α group, indicate that Svātmārāma read sthāpayed ṛḍḍham icchayā (which is also the reading which Mallinson's stemmatic hypothesis indicates is primary in the Dattātreyayogaśāstra) and we have adopted it accordingly. It is certainly the lectio difficilior. Taking kaṇṭhaṃ as the object of sthāpayet is awkward, as it is hard to see how one could place the throat on the chest, and the meaning of icchayā, which we have translated as “deliberately”, is uncertain.

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (a: na-vipulā)

3.67

Translation: Because it binds all the channels in which the liquid from the void flows down, it is [called] the jālandhara lock. It gets rid of all problems in the throat.

Sources:

Vivekamārtanḍa 45

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.66ef–2.67ab, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 77r (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadeva 7.230 (attrib. Śivayoga) badhnāti hi HRĀ YBhD] badhnātiha YCM adhogāminabhojalam YCM] nādho yāti nabhojalam HRĀ YBhD bandhaḥ HRĀ YBhD] proktaḥ YCM kaṇṭhaduḥkhaughanāśanaḥ YBhD] kaṇṭhasaṅkocane kṛte HRĀ, kaṇṭhe duḥkhaughanāśanaḥ YCM

3.68

Translation: When the jālandhara lock is performed, its defining feature being the contraction of the throat, nectar does not fall in the fire and the breath does not escape.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 46

pradhāvati VM] prakupyati VMv.l.

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 77v (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadeva 7.231 (attrib. Śivayoga) pradhāvati] prakupyati YCM YBhD

3.69

Translation: By contracting the throat, [the yogi] firmly blocks the two channels. This should be known as the middle cakra, which binds [the mind to] the sixteen supports [in the body].

Sources:

Īñānasāra 2.4

saṅkocanenaiva] saṅkocanaṃ kṛtvā JS dṛḍham] dhruvam JS jñeyam] bhadre JS

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 77v (attrib. HP)

Cf. Haṭhayogasaṃhitā p. 23

kaṇṭhasaṅkocanaṃ kṛtvā cibukaṃ hṛdaye nyaset/jālandhare kṛte bandhe ṣoḍaśādhārabandhanam//

Commentary: The import of the second line of this verse is not entirely clear without the context of the source text. It derives from a passage in the Īñānasāra (2.1–5), which identifies khecarīmudrā as the ‘cakra of the void’ (vyomacakra) and khecarīmudrā combined with the contraction of the throat as the ‘middle cakra’

(madhyacakra). The middle cakra seems to be so designated because it is situated between the vyomacakra and a root cakra (mūlacakra), which is located between two śaktis in the navel.

Svātmārāma appears to have incorporated the Jñānasāra's verse on khecarī and the madhyacakra into his discussion of the jālandhara lock because its reference to contracting the throat (kaṇṭhasaṅkocana) reinforces the idea that this contraction blocks important channels, a point stated more generally in the two preceding verses that he borrowed from the Vivekamārtaṇḍa. The Jñānasāra's verse on vyomacakra was incorporated into later versions of the Haṭhapradīpikā (see the commentary on X4.49).

In Jyotsnā 3.73, Brahmānanda, who appears to have been unaware of the Jñānasāra, says that the middle cakra (madhyacakra) is viśuddha cakra. He appears to say this because the viśuddha cakra is located in the throat and the jālandhara lock is a contraction of the throat. However, he also connects the viśuddha cakra to the sixteen supports (ṣoḍaśādhāra) at the end of this verse, perhaps because this cakra has sixteen petals (as mentioned in 3.46). On the meaning of ādhāra in yogic contexts, see entry no. 3 in the Tāntrikābhidhānaśāstra vol. 1: 191.

3.70

Translation: This triad of locks is the best [and] has been practised by the great Siddhas. Yogis know it to be a method of all systems of Haṭha.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.68, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 77v (attrib. HP), Haṭhatattvakaumudī 15.24

bandhatrayam idaṃ HRĀ YCM] idaṃ bandhatrayaṃ HTK mahāsiddhair niṣevitam] mahāsiddhaiś ca sevitaṃ HRĀ, mahāsiddhaniṣevitaṃ YCM, marujjayasiddhadam HTK haṭha YCM] yoga HRĀ HTK sādhanaṃ HRĀ HTK] sādhanē YCM yogino viduḥ HRĀ HTK] yoginām iti YCM

3.70*1

Translation: By immediately contracting the lower [part of the body] (i.e. by the root lock) when the neck has been contracted (i.e. by the jālandhara lock) and by stretching the abdomen backwards in the middle [of the body] (i.e. by the uḍḍiyāṇa lock), the breath enters the channel of Brahman.

Sources:

Gorakṣasataka 63 (see 2.46)

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.8, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 80r, Yuktabhavadeva 7.95 and Haṭhatattvakau- mudī 15.25 (see 2.46).

3.71

Translation: [The yogi] should contract the place of the root and do the uḍḍiyāṇa [lock]. He should [then] block the Iḍā and Piṅgalā [channels] and make [the breath] flow in the rear pathway.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.70, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 79v (attrib. HP)

samākuñcya HRĀ] samākṛṣya YCM uḍḍiyāṇaṁ] uḍḍiyāṇaṁ HRĀ, YCM paścimaṁ pathaṁ HRĀ] paścime pathi YCM

3.72

Translation: By this method alone [the yogi] may frequent the [true] home of the breath. Then death does not arise nor old age, disease and the like.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.71, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 79v (attrib. HP)

sevayet YCM] prayāti HRĀ pavanālayam YCM] pavano layam HRĀ

Commentary: As far as we know, the compound pavanālaya does not occur in other yoga texts. Here, it appears to refer to Suṣumṇā. The similar compound prāṇālaya is mentioned in other yoga texts, such as the Yogayājñavalkya (4.52–53), but it refers to the locations in the body where prāṇa resides, as opposed to the other bodily winds.

3.73 heading

Translation: Now, the inverted bodily position:

3.73

Translation: The navel is up, the palate down; the sun up, the moon down: the bodily position called “inverted” is obtained through the teaching of a guru.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 115

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.74, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 73r (attrib. HP), Yuktabhavadeva 7.236 (attrib. Gorakṣanātha)

ūrdhvaṃ nābhir HRĀ YBhD] ūrdhvanābhir YCM ūrdhvaṃ bhānur HRĀ YBhD] ūrdhvaḥbhānur YCM guruvākyena labhyate HRĀ] sarvavyādhivināśinī YCM, guruvaktreṇa gamyate YBhD

3.74

Translation: The bodily position called “inverted” destroys all diseases. For [the yogi] who regularly engages in [its] practice, it increases the digestive fire.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 146

karaṇī] karaṇaṃ DYŚ
 vināśinī] vināśanam DYŚ jāṭharāgnivivardhanī] jāṭharāgnir vivardhate DYŚ

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.75, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 78r (cd only) (attrib. Dattātreyā) vivardhani] vivardhini HRĀ, vivardhanam YCM

3.75

Translation: A lot of food should be provided for the practitioner. If the practitioner eats little, fire will quickly consume his body.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 147

sādhakasya tu] sāmkr̥te dhruvam DYŚ

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.76, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 78r (attrib. Dattātreyā)

sādhakasya tu] sādhakena vai HRĀ, sāmkr̥te dhruvam YCM agnir deham] deham agnir HRĀ, agnir dāhaṃ YCM dahet kṣaṇāt] dahet kramāt HRĀ, karoti vai YCM

Cf. Yuktabhavadēva 7.238

asyāṃ kriyamāṇāyāṃ sādhakasya bhakṣyaṃ bahulaṃ sampādyam anyathā pravṛddho jāṭharāṇalo dhātuṃ dahatīti//

Commentary: Svātmārāma has removed the vocative from the Dattātreyayogaśāstra, changing sāmkr̥te dhruvam to sādhakasya tu.

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (c: na-vipulā)

3.76

Translation: On the first day [the yogi] should keep his head down and his feet up for a short while, and he should [then] practise for a little longer each day.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 148c–149b

adhahśirāś DYŚ] adhaḥśirāś DYŚv.l.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.77, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 78r (attrib. Dattātreyā)

śirāś YCM] śirāś HRĀ

pādaḥ HRĀv.l. YCM] pādaḥ HRĀ

Cf. Yuktabhavadēva 7.237

sa ca prathamadine kṣaṇamātraṃ vidheyā dvitīyadine/ kiñcidadhikaṃ kālam evaṃ yāmaparyantaṃ vidheyā/

Commentary: It appears that the masculine stem form śira was widely understood in the Haṭhapradīpikā's transmission instead of the more common śiras, which would be rendered śirāḥ at the end of a bahuvrīhi compound.

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (a: ra-vipulā; c: na-vipulā)

3.77

Translation: After six months grey hair and wrinkles disappear. [The yogi] who regularly practises for three hours conquers death.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 149c–150b

māsordhvaṃ na DYŚ] māsāṃ hi na DYŚv.l., māsāc ca na DYŚv.l.

tu] hi DYŚ kālajit DYŚ] yogavit DYŚv.l.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.78, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 78r (attrib. Dattātreyā), Yuktabhavadēva 7.238 (attrib. Gorakṣanātha)

valiś ca YCM] valitaṃ HRĀ YBhD māsordhvaṃ na] māsān na tu HRĀ, māsārdhe na YCM, māsārdhān na YBhD

Cf. Haṭhatattvakaumudī 14.3

ūrdhvaṇ pādo hy adhomastakaḥ syāt kṣaṇam vāsare'thādime'bhyāsavṛddhyā dhayet/

evam abhyāsato yāmamātraṃ sadā mṛtyujit syāj jarājic ca ṣaṇmāsataḥ//

Commentary: We have adopted the reading ṣaṇmāsordhvaṃ in the second verse quarter. It is attested by manuscripts of the Dattātreyayogaśāstra (the source text) and the Īyotsnā (3.82). It makes good sense and explains the rather odd readings in α and other manuscripts, ṣaṇmāsārdhān, ṣaṇmāsārdhaṃ and ṣaṇmāsārdhe. The γ and δ groups have a different verb as well, ṣaṇmāsārdhena naśyati.

3.77*1

Translation: The sun devours whatever nectar flows from the divine moon. As a result, the body is afflicted by old age.

Commentary: See 4.10–11, where these verses are also found.

The α group do not have 3.77*1 and 3.77*2 in the third chapter (but rather in the fourth) and other manuscripts omit them as well (notably the η group). For a discussion of these verses, see the introduction p. 77.

3.77*2

Translation: There is a divine bodily position for this, which blocks the mouth of the sun. It is to be known from the teaching of a guru and not through countless scriptural teachings.

3.78 heading

Translation: Now vajrolī:

3.78

Translation: Even if he behaves as he wishes without [following] the observances taught in yoga, the [yogi] who knows vajrolī is worthy of success.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 152

yogoktair] yogokta DYŚ

vajrolīm] vajrolīm DYŚ bhājanam] bhājanaḥ DYŚ, mān bhavet DYŚv.l.

Cf. Śivasamhitā 4.79

svecchayā vartamāno'pi yogoktaniyamair vinā/

mukto bhaved gr̥hastho'pi vajrolyabhyāsayogataḥ//

Testimonia:

Cf. Haṭharatnāvalī 2.79 (on viparītakaraṇī) svasthaṃ yo vartamāno'pi yogoktair niyamair vinā/karaṇī viparītākhyā śrīnivāsena lakṣitā//

Cf. Yogalakṣaṇāvalī f. 31r

svecchayā vartamāno'pi yogoktaniyamair vinā/

vajrolyabhyāsayogena yogī siddhim avāpnuyāt//

Cf. Yuktabhavadēva 7.240 (attrib. to Gorakṣanātha)

vajrolīm kathayiṣyāmi gopitām sarvayogibhiḥ/tyaktayogoktaniyamā yayā sidhyanti yoginaḥ//

Commentary: In manuscripts of the delta group, the vajrolī section is placed at the end of the work and the following comment is inserted at this place in the third chapter:

atratiyā vajrolī granthānte likhitā/ kramaprāptāpy atra tyaktā/ asād-hāraṇapṛānyanuṣṭheyatvāt tasyāḥ/

Vajrolī, which is [usually] here, has been copied at the end of the text. Even though it comes here, it has been left out because it is to be practised [only] by special individuals.

3.79

Translation: I shall teach you two substances [needed] for it which are hard for just anyone to obtain. One is milk and the second is an obedient woman.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 153ab-154ab

yasya kasya cit] yena kena cit DYŚ tu] ca DYŚ

Testimonia:

Yuktabhavadēva 7.241 (attrib. Gorakṣanātha), Haṭhayogasamhitā p. 39

tatra HYS] atra YBhD vakṣye HYS] manye YBhD caikaṃ HYS] ekaṃ YBhD
ca HYS] sva YBhD

Commentary: On the possible referents of kṣīra, see MALLINSON 2024 on Dattātreyayogaśāstra 154. According to Brahmānanda (Jyotsnā 3.84), the compound vaśavartinī, which we have translated as ‘an obedient woman,’ could be a wife (vaśavartinī svādhīnā nārī vanitā). In 3.82, the reading bhāryābhage in η_1 , η_2 and π_ω supports Brahmānanda’s view that the woman is the yogi’s wife.

3.80

Translation: [The yogi] should gently practise a full upward contraction through the urethra. Either a man or a woman may obtain success in vajrolī.

Testimonia:

Haṭhayogasamhitā 53 (p. 39)

puruṣo vāpi nārī vā] puruṣo 'py athavā nārī HYS

Cf. Haṭhatattvakaumudī 16.4

apānamārgataḥ samyag ūrdhvakuñcanam abhyaset/puruṣo vāpi nārī vā vajrolisiddhibhājanam// apānamārgato gudadeśena ūrdhvam upari kuñcanam saṃkocanam ūrdhvam ākarṣaṇam vā abhyaset// iti//

Commentary: In the Haṭhatattvakaumudī, Sundaradeva states that this upward contraction of the urethra, which is the method by which fluids are drawn up it, is done in the region of apānavāyu and the anus. Brahmānanda states that this practice is done immediately after sex.

3.81

Translation: Using a hollow stalk of bamboo grass, [the yogi] should carefully [and] very gently blow into the opening of the penis in order to make air move [into the urethra].

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 165

yatnataḥ] tatas tu DYŚ

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.86–2.87 (attrib. HP), Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā f. 39r (attrib. HP)

yatnataḥ HRĀ] yantritaḥ HSC

Cf. Yuktabhavadēva 7.248cd–249ab rasanālena phūtkāraṃ vāyoḥ sañcārakāraṇāt// kuryāt śanaiḥ śanair yogī yāvac chaktiḥ prajāyate/

3.82

Translation: With practice, [the yogi] may draw up semen which is falling into a woman's vagina. And [even] if his own semen has moved [down], he may draw it upwards and retain it.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 166

nāryā bhage patadbindum] tadbhage patitaṃ bindum DYŚ svakaṃ] tathā DYŚ

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.96cd–2.97ab, Haṭhayogasamhitā p. 39

nāryā bhage] nāryā bhagāt HRĀ, nārībhage HYS svakaṃ] nijaṃ HRĀ HYS

Cf. Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā f. 39r

apānam ākuñcya tato'balenordhvam dugdham ākrṣṭividhikrameṇa/samabhyasen niścalam alpaṃ alpaṃ bhage patadbindum athordhvam āharet//

3.83

Translation: [If] the knower of yoga preserves his semen thus, he conquers death. Death arises through the loss of semen and life from retaining semen.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 167

tu rakṣayed] ca rakṣito DYŚ yogavit] tattvataḥ DYŚ
jīvitam] jīvanam DYŚ

Cf. Amṛtasiddhi 3.87cd

marāṇaṃ bindupātena jīvanam bindudhāraṇāt//

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.97cd-2.98ab, Yuktabhavadēva 252cd-253ab, Haṭhayogasamhitā p. 39 evam tu rakṣayed bindum] evaṃ samrakṣayed bindum HRĀ HYS, evaṃ bindau sthire jāte YBhD yogavit HRĀ HYS] sarvathā YBhD jīvitam HRĀ] jīvanam YBhD HYS

3.84

Translation: As a result of the retention of semen, the yogi's body becomes fragrant. As long as semen is steady in the body then why fear death?

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 86cd (ab only), Vivekamārtaṇḍa 52ad (cd only) sugandhi yogino deham] yogino 'ṅge sugandhaḥ syāt DYŚ jāyate] satatam DYŚ sthiro] sthito VM

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.112ab, Haṭhayogasamhitā p. 39

sugandhi] sugandhir HRĀ, sugandho HYS deham] dehe HRĀ HYS
mrtyubhayam] kālabhayam HYS

Cf. Haṭhatattvakaumudī 16.10 (attrib. granthāntara)

calitam tu svakam bindum ūrdhvam ākuñcya rakṣayet/sugandho yoginām dehe jāyate bindudhāraṇād// iti//

Commentary: The omission of 3.84ab in the η group and δ_3 is likely to be the result of haplography (bindudhāraṇāt is repeated).

The readings mṛtyubhayaṃ (α_3 , δ , ε , η , π) and kālabhayaṃ (α_2 , γ) are well attested by the main manuscript groups, but mṛtyubhayaṃ is in the important witnesses of the source text, the Vivekamārtaṇḍa.

3.85

Translation: In men semen is dependent on the mind and life is dependent on semen, so semen and the mind should be carefully guarded.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.98

manāyattam] cittāyattam HRĀ YCM manaś caiva HRĀ] ca śukraṃ ca YCM

Commentary: Both α_2 and α_3 indicate that manas instead of citta was the reading of the initial compound. Therefore, we have conjectured manāyattam, assuming double sandhi from manas-āyattam.

3.86

Translation: In this way a [the yogi] may also hold on to [both] the menses of a menstruating woman and his own semen. He who has mastered yoga through correct practice may draw up [both] through the urethra.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.100cd (ab only) svīyaṃ] rajo HRĀ, bijaṃ HYS yogavān] yogavit HYS

3.86*1

Translation: This yoga succeeds for those who have merit, are fortunate, abide in truth, and are without jealousy, not for those who are jealous.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 176

matsara] mātṣarya DYŚ

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.110, Haṭhayogasaṃhitā pp. 40–41

dhanyānām HRĀ] dhīrānām HYS śālinām HRĀ] darśinām HYS

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (a: bha-vipulā; c: ma-vipulā)

3.87 heading

Translation: Now sahajolī:

3.87

Translation: Sahajolī and amarolī are varieties of vajrolī.

Sources:

Cf. Dattātreyayogaśāstra 31cd

vajrolir amaroliś ca sahajolis tridhā matā/

Cf. Śivasamhitā 4.95ab

sahajolyamarolī ca vajrolyā bhedato bhavet/

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.113cd, Haṭhayogasamhitā p. 40

sahajolī cāmarolī HRĀ] sahajoliś cāmarolir HYS

eva bhedataḥ HRĀ] bheda eva te HYS

Commentary: These two pādas appear to stand apart and function as a heading introducing the practices of sahajolī and amarolī, which are described in the verses that follow. Some manuscript groups other than α and π insert separate headings for sahajolī and amarolī. However, since 3.87 introduces these practices, these additional headings are redundant and unlikely to be original.

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (a: ra-vipulā)

3.88

Translation: After intercourse using vajrolī, the woman and man should put ash made from burnt cow dung in water [and] smear their bodies [with it...]

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 182

jaleṣu bhasma nikṣipya] tajjale bhasma saṃkṣipya DYŚ, tajjale bhasmasāt kṣipya DYŚv.l., tajjale bhasma saddravyaṃ DYŚv.l.

pumsoḥ svāṅga] pumsoḥ aṅga DYŚ

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.114, Haṭhayogasamhitā p.40

jaleṣu bhasma] jale subhasma HRĀ HYS

pumsoḥ svāṅga HYS] pumsoś cāṅga HRĀ

Commentary: Some manuscripts, including α_2 and α_3 (missing in α_1), omit 3.88ab. We have included it because in the Dattātreyayogaśāstra, the source of this verse, 3.88ab specifies the substance mentioned in 3.88cd that the man and woman are supposed to rub into their bodies after sexual intercourse.

In the Dattātreyayogaśāstra's teaching on sahajolī (163 and 181–183) a rag is used to wipe up the residue of a mixture of semen and sweat that has been rubbed into the body, and then soaked in a paste of water and ash before being rubbed over the body.

The awkward plural jaleṣu in 3.88a was probably the result of Svātmārāma removing the pronoun from the compound tajjale in the Dattātreyayogaśāstra's verse because it has no referent in the Haṭhapradīpikā's compilation.

3.89

Translation: [...] while sitting at complete ease, having just finished intercourse. This is called sahajolī. It is always to be trusted by yogis.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 183

sahajolīr iyaṃ proktā] sahaolī ca samproktā DYŚ

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.115, Haṭhayogasaṃhitā p. 40

kṣaṇam HRĀ] kṣaṇāt HYS

sahajolīr iyaṃ] sahaolīr iyaṃ HRĀ HYS

śraddheyā HYS] kartavyā HRĀ

Commentary: We have understood the repha in sahajolīr iyaṃ as a hiatus bridge. Elsewhere the nominative of this name is found only as sahajolī or sahajoliḥ.

3.89*1

Translation: This auspicious yoga bestows liberation even when pleasure has been enjoyed.

Testimonia:

Haṭhayogasaṃhitā p. 40

yogo] yogī HYS

bhoge bhukte] bhogayukto HYS

Commentary: This line is absent in α_2 , α_3 and γ_1 (missing in α_1). It may have been adapted from Dattātreyayogaśāstra 179cd (tasmād ayaṃ vakṣyamāṇo bhoge bhukte 'pi muktidaḥ). Cf. 3.93cd.

3.90 heading

Translation: Now amarolī:

3.90

Translation: Leaving out the first flow because of its excessive heat and the last flow because it is worthless, the cool middle flow of urine is used by Kāpālikas of the Khaṇḍa school.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.116, Haṭhatattvakaumudī 16.17, Haṭhayogasamhitā p. 41

pittolbaṇatvāt HRĀ v.l.HTK HYS] vihāya nityāṃ HRĀ prathamāṃ ca dhārāṃ HRĀ HTK] prathamāmbudhārāṃ HYS vihāya niḥsāratayāntyadhārāṃ HRĀ HTK] niṣevyate śītalamadhyadhārā HYS niṣevyate śītalamadhyadhārā HTK] niṣevyate śītalamadhyadhārāṃ HRĀ, vihāya niḥsāratayāntya-dhārāṃ HYS kāpālikaiḥ khaṇḍamatair amaryāḥ] kāpālikaiḥ khaṇḍamatair anarghyāṃ HRĀ, kāpā-likaiḥ khaṇḍamate 'maroli HTK, kāpālike khaṇḍamate 'maroli HYS

Commentary: We understand 'Kāpālikas of the Khaṇḍa school' (kāpālikair khaṇḍa-mataiḥ) to be referring to followers of the Khaṇḍakāpālika who is mentioned in the list of siddhas given at 1.5–9, pace MARCINKOWSKA-ROSÓŁ AND SELLMER (2021: 105–108) who understand khaṇḍamataiḥ to mean 'whose doctrine is defective'.

Metre: Upajāti

3.91

Translation: [The yogi] who regularly imbibes urine, taking it by the nose every day, practises vajrolī thus. This is called amarolī.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 180c–181b

abhyased evam] abhyasec ceyam DYŚ (em.), abhyasec chrayam DYŚ v.l., abhyaset yeyam DYŚ v.l., abhyasec caivam DYŚ v.l.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.117, Haṭhayogasamhitā 65 (p.41)

kuryād HRĀ] kurvan HYS abhyased evam] abhyasen nityam HRĀ, abhyaset samyag HYS

3.91*1

Translation: If a woman draws up the semen of a man through skillfulness in the correct practice and retains her menses by means of vajrolī, it is she who is a [true] yoginī.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 169cd (cd only)

Testimonia:

Haṭhayogasamhitā p. 41

sā hi] sā 'pi HYS

Commentary: In the first verse quarter, the gerund samākrṣya (γ) has been adopted, instead of the better-attested samākuñcyā, as it yields a more appropriate sense and is used similarly to ākṣya in 3.82.

Verses 3.91*1–3 have been greyscaled because they are absent in α_3 (and missing in α_1). They appear to have been borrowed from the Dattātreyayogaśāstra's section on vajrolī, perhaps with the intention of supplementing 3.92–93 by providing additional details on how a woman practises vajrolī. The verses are present in α_2 after verse 3.86ab where the verse quarter vajrolyā saha yoginī occurs twice (also at 3.92b), which suggests that the version of vajrolī in α_2 has been subject to further revision. The fact that 3.91*1–3 are in all groups except α indicates that they were added early in the transmission of the Haṭhapradīpikā.

3.91*2

Translation: Assuredly none of her menses is lost. The nāda in her body turns into bindu.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 174

tasyāḥ kiñ cid] tasyās tadā DYŚ

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.108ab (cd only), Haṭhayogasamhitā pp. 41–42

nādas tu HRĀ] nādaś ca HYS

Commentary: On why this verse is in greyscale, see the note to 3.91*1.

On nāda and bindu see the note to 3.52.

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (c: ma-vipulā)

3.91*3

Translation: The bindu and rajas, which are produced in her own body, become one through vajrolī and bring about complete perfection by means of practice.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 175

sarvasiddhiṃ prakurvataḥ] sarvasiddhiḥ prajāyate DYŚ

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.108cd–109ab

svadehajau HRĀ] svadehagau HYS

sarvasiddhiṃ prakurvataḥ] yogasiddhiḥ kare sthitā HRĀ, sarvasiddhiṃ prayacchataḥ HYS

Commentary: On why this verse is in greyscale, see the note to 3.91*1.

3.92

Translation: It is she who preserves her menses by means of the upward contraction who is the [true] yoginī. She knows the past and the future, and is sure to become a sky-rover (khecari).

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 170ab (cd only)

ca] vā DYŚ

Testimonia:

Haṭhayogasamhitā p. 42

ākuñcanenordhvaṃ] ākuñcanād ūrdhvaṃ HYS

atitānāgatajñānaṃ khecari] atitānāgataṃ vetti khecari HYS

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (c: na-vipulā)

3.93

Translation: And she attains perfection of the body as a result of the practice of vajrolī. This auspicious yoga bestows liberation even when pleasure has been enjoyed.

Sources:

Dattātreyayogaśāstra 179

ayaṃ śubhakaro yogo] tasmād ayaṃ vakṣyamāṇo DYŚ bhoge bhukte 'pi muktidaḥ DYŚ (conj.)] bhoge bhukte tv abhuktidaḥ DYŚv.L., bhogo yogaś ca muktidaḥ DYŚv.L.

Testimonia:

Cf. Haṭharatnāvalī 2.111

sarveṣāṃ eva yogānāṃ ayaṃ yogaḥ śubhañkaraḥ/

tasmād ayaṃ variṣṭho'sau bhuktimuktiphalapradah//

Haṭhayogasamhitā p. 42

śubhakaro] puṇyakaro HYS

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (a: ra-vipulā)

3.93*1

3.93*2 heading

Translation: Now the Moving of the Goddess (śakticālanam):

3.93*2

Translation: She whose body is bent (kuṭilāṅgī), she who is coiled (kuṇḍalinī), the female snake (bhujāṅgī), the power (śakti), the goddess (īśvarī), she who is coiled (kuṇḍalī) and Arundhati: these words are synonyms.

Testimonia:

Cf. Haṭharatnāvalī 2.125–127

phaṇi kuṇḍalinī nāgī cakrī vakrī sarasvatī/lalanā rasanā kṣatrī lalāṭī śaktiḥ śaṃkhiṇī// rajvī bhujāṅgī śeṣā ca kuṇḍalī sarpiṇī maṇiḥ/ādhāraśaktiḥ kuṭilā karālī prāṇavāhinī// aṣṭavakrā ṣaḍādhārā vyāpinī kalanādhārā/kurīty evaṃ ca vikhyātāḥ śabdāḥ paryāyavācakāḥ//

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 78v (attrib. Haṭhayoga), Yuktabhavadēva 7.300 (attrib. Śivayoga) kuṭilāṅgī YBhD] kuṇḍalāṅgī YCM kuṇḍaly arundhati YBhD] kuṭilārundhati YCM ceti] devī YCM YBhD

Commentary: The α_3 manuscript has a significantly shorter and more coherent version of śakticālana. It omits six introductory verses, of which three are from the Vivekamārtaṇḍa or one of its longer recensions and three have no known source, including one that contains a list of synonyms for kuṇḍalinī. This section is missing in α_1 (3.83–3.96) and α_2 adds these verses (except 3.93*6) after 3.96, which suggests that they have been inserted from elsewhere. Generally speaking, it appears that some redactors have taken the section on śakticālana in the Haṭhapradīpikā as an opportunity to add material on kuṇḍalinī, in particular her location, shape, and soteriological importance.

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (a: bha-vipulā)

3.93*3

Translation: Just as one might use a key to force open a double door, so the yogi breaks open the door to liberation with Kuṇḍalinī.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 35

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 78v (attrib. Haṭhayoga), Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā f. 110r (attrib. HP)

3.93*4

Translation: The supreme goddess sleeps with her mouth covering the opening of the pathway by which the perfect place of Brahman is reached.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 33

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 78v (attrib. Haṭhayoga), Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā f. 110r (attrib. HP)
mārgeṇa HSC] dvāreṇa YCM

3.93*5

Translation: The coiled goddess, who sleeps above the bulb [in the abdomen], leads to liberation for yogis and bondage for the deluded. He who knows her knows yoga.

Sources:

Vivekamārtaṇḍa 39

suptā mokṣāya yoginām VM] aṣṭadhā kuṇḍalikṛtā VMv.L., aṣṭadhā kuṇḍalākṛtiḥ VMv.L., śubhamokṣāpradāyini VMv.L., śubhā mokṣāpradāyini VMv.L., aṣṭadhā kuṭīlikṛtā VMv.L.

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 78v (attrib. Haṭhayoga), Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā f. 110r (attrib. HP) kandordhvaṃ HSC] kandordhve YCM śaktiḥ suptā HSC] śaktir buddhā YCM

3.93*6

Translation: [Just as] the coiled serpent Ananta (śeṣakuṇḍalī) is the foundation of the oceans, mountains and islands, so Kuṇḍalinī is the foundation of all systems of yoga.

Testimonia:

Cf. Haṭharatnāvalī 2.124 (see HP 3.1)

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 78v (attrib. Haṭhayoga)

Commentary: This verse is similar to 3.1.

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (a: ma-vipulā)

3.93*7

Translation: Kuṇḍalinī is said to have a curved shape like a snake. The person who makes that goddess move is sure to be liberated.

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 78v–79r (attrib. Haṭhayoga)

3.93*8–10

Commentary: For the translation and philological commentary, see 4.61–64.

3.94

Translation: Between the Gaṅgā and Yamunā is the wretched young widow. [The yogi] should forcefully take [her]. That is the supreme state of Viṣṇu.

Sources:

Cf. Śivasamhitā 5.169

gaṅgāyamunayor madhye vahaty eṣā sarasvatī/tāsām tu samgame snātvā dhanyo yāti parām gatim//

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 79r (attrib. Haṭhayoga)

Commentary: The referent of bālaraṇḍā tapasvinī here is unclear. In some manuscripts this verse is followed by one (3.94*1) in which bālaraṇḍā is identified as sarasvatī, which in the context of śakticālana could refer to the tongue. She could also be Kuṇḍalinī, who in 3.93*5 is located at the navel, which is said to be the location of Viṣṇu (e.g. Dhyānabindūpaniṣat 28–30). In his commentary on this verse in the Bodhasāra (1906: 137), Divākara says that the seizing of Kuṇḍalinī itself is the highest state of Viṣṇu (... bālaraṇḍām ... grhṇīyād vaśikuryāt tat tasyā vaśikaraṇam eva viṣṇor vyāpanalakṣanasya paramātmanah paramam kevalam ... padam svarūpam jñeyam).

3.94*1

Translation: The Blessed Gaṅgā is the Iḍā [channel], the river Yamunā is Piṅgalā, [and] the young widow, the Sarasvatī, is between Iḍā and Piṅgalā.

Commentary: Verse 3.94*1, which has no known source, simply identifies the technical terms in 3.94, namely, gaṅgā, yamunā and bālaraṇḍā as iḍā, piṅgalā and sarasvatī. The verse appears to be missing in α_3 , and a different version of it occurs in α_2 . The relevant folio is missing in α_1 . Nonetheless, the verse is absent in the most reliable manuscripts of the γ , δ , ϵ , and π groups, and so it is likely that it came into the text as a marginal note early in the transmission. Sources:

Cf. Mahābhārata, Bhīṣmaparvan 40.78 (supplementary verses 3A.41–42)

iḍā bhagavatī gaṅgā piṅgalā yamunā nadī/tayor madhye tṛtīyā tu tat prayāgam anusmaret//

3.95

Translation: Seizing her tail, the fearless [yogi] wakes the sleeping serpent. She shakes off sleep and is forced to stand up straight.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.118, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 79r (attrib. HP)

pucchaṃ YCM] pucche HRĀ abhiḥ HRĀ] abhi YCM

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (a: na-vipulā)

3.95*1

Translation: The yogi should breathe in through the solar channel, take hold of the open-mouthed hooded [serpent] by wrapping a cloth around [her] and move her sideways for an hour and a half in the morning and evening.

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 79r (attrib. Haṭhayoga), Yogalakṣanāvalī f. 30v pravistṛtāsaiva phaṇāvati sā] paristhitā caiva phaṇāvati sā YCM, vajrāsanasthā bhujagī praṅṛhya YLĀ sūryāt YLĀ] sauryā YCM paridhānayuktyā] paridhānamuktā YCM, paridhānayuktā YLĀ praṅṛhya tiryak paricālanīyā] praṅṛhya niryāti vicālitā sā YCM, pāyūṃ samākumcyā ca cālanīyā YLĀ

Cf. Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā f. 110v–111r (attrib. HP) tadvidhim āha/paristhitā caiva phaṇāvati sā prātaś ca sāyaṃ praharārdhamātram/prapūrya sūryāt paridhānayuktā praṅṛhya tīrthāt paricālanīyā// paridhānayukteti dvādaśāṅgulapramitasitasūkṣmacaturaṅgulavisṛtaśuddhavastrakhaṇḍena dṛḍhaṃ veṣṭatā sā prasiddhā phaṇāvati suṣumṇāt-makā arundhatī jihvaiva kuṇḍalinī// uktaṃ ca// arundhatī bhaved jīhvā dhruvo nāsāgramāṇḍalam iti// tām jīhvām laṃbikāyogenordhvaṃ tālvantarbhṛmadhyadeśe vihitām tatas tīrthād bhrūmadhyāt praṅṛhya adhaḥ kṛtvā tasyā gurūpadiṣṭavartmanā cālanam vidheyam iti saṃketah/ cālanam tu khecarī mudrā sādhanavad vidheyam/ tīrtham bhrūmadhyah/

Commentary: Verses 3.95*1–2 are absent in α_2 and α_3 . They introduce the idea of awakening kuṇḍalinī by moving the tongue with a cloth, which is a practice called sarasvaticālana in the Gorakṣaśataka (16–25). These verses do not have a known source and are somewhat obscure unless one is aware of the more coherent explanation of this practice in the Gorakṣaśataka. In his Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā (see testimonia), Sundaradeva makes sense of this verse by equating the tongue with Kuṇḍalinī. This enables him to understand the reference to the cloth (paridhāna) as the technique of wrapping the tongue in a cloth and milking it (i.e. sarasvaticālana in the Gorakṣaśataka). This interpretation also makes sense of the next verse (3.95*2), which describes the cloth.

Metre: Upajāti

3.95*2

Translation: It is said that the characteristics of the cloth for wrapping around [the tongue] are that it is a handspan long, four fingerbreadths wide, soft and white.

Commentary: This verse was likely added to explain ‘by the method of the cloth’ (paridhānayuktyā) in the previous verse. For information on sources and testimonia, see 3.32*5.

3.96

Translation: Sitting in vajrāsana, the yogī should move Kuṇḍalinī and immediately afterwards perform bhastrī. He quickly awakens Kuṇḍalinī.

Testimonia:

Yogabīja 111 (South Indian recension), Yogacintāmaṇi f. 79r (attrib. Haṭhayoga), Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā f. 111r

kuryād YB] sūryād YCM HSC

Commentary: Bhastrī or bhastrikā kumbhaka is taught at 2.60–68. The reference to vajrāsana may be pointing to the practice of udḍiyāna, which was described earlier in the chapter and is supposed to awaken Kuṇḍalinī. The contraction of the sun mentioned in the next verse supports this.

3.97

Translation: [The yogi] should contract the sun and then move Kuṇḍalinī. Even if he were in the jaws of death, why would he fear death?

Testimonia:

Yogabīja 83 (South Indian recension), Yogacintāmaṇi f. 79r (attrib. Haṭhayoga)

vaktra YCM] vartma YB

Cf. Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā f. 111r

bhānor ākuñcanam kuryāt kuṇḍaliṃ cālayet svataḥ/mṛtyuvakragatasyāpi tasya mṛtyubhayam kutaḥ// asyārthaḥ sūryanāḍyākarṣaṇena vahneḥ prācuryam tasmāj jvalanatejasā apānavāyavākarṣaṇena vā kuṇḍalyābodho bhavati/ tasya śakticālanakṛtāb-hyāsasya mṛtyubhayam kuta iti//

Commentary: In Jyotsnā 3.116, Brahmānanda understands bhānor ākuñcanam as a contraction of the navel. In contrast, Sundaradeva, in his Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā (see testimonia), interprets it as drawing prāṇa through the sun channel (sūryanāḍyākarṣaṇa), thereby intensifying the bodily fire.

3.97*1

Translation: When prāṇa has been greatly extended as a result of breath flowing through the path of the right nostril, [the yogi], with his body already immortal, filled with the nectar of the moon from the uvula in that way, sprinkling [with nectar] the network of channels at the aperture at [the centre of] the brow that have been subjugated by the mighty fire of time, makes his body completely new again like the trunk of a withered tree [when it regenerates].

Sources:

Amaraughaśāsana 6.1–2 (sic; a single śārdūlavikrīḍita verse is numbered thus) dakṣiṇa] pāścima AŚ vāhi] vāha AŚ prāṇo] prāṇe AŚ candrābhaḥparipūrītāmṛtatanuḥ] candrāmbupratisāraṇām sukrītinah AŚ kāyās tathaḥ] kāyāḥ pathaḥ AŚ vaśagān bhrūrandhra] vaśagaṃ bhūtvā sa AŚ nāḍigaṇān] nāḍīsatam AŚ, nāḍīgataṃ AŚv.l., nāḍīgaṇaṃ AŚv.l.

 tat kāyaṃ] tat kāryaṃ AŚ

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 79r (attrib. Haṭhayoga)

pavanāt] pavano YCM prāṇo] ghrāṇe YCM kṛte] kṛtaḥ YCM
 kāyās tathaḥ] kāyās tataḥ YCM siñcan] bhīdan YCM
 tat kāyaṃ] taṃ kāyaṃ YCM

Commentary: Verse 3.97*1 is absent in the α group. It is very close to a verse in the Amaraughaśāsana, which is likely to be its source, although the date of the Amaraughaśāsana is yet to be firmly established. This verse's import of rejuvenating the body by flooding it with nectar is not directly connected with those proceeding it. Its meaning is not clear in the published edition of the Amaraughaśāsana and we are not confident of the readings adopted in our edition nor the meaning of the verse.

Metre: Śārdūlavikrīḍita

3.97*2

Translation: After moving Kuṇḍalinī, the yogi should perform bhastrī in particular. The god of death is afraid of the ascetic who regularly practises in this way.

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 79r (attrib. Haṭhayoga), Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā f. 111v–112r

bhastrīm HSC | bhastrām YCM

śaṅkate yamaḥ YCM | śaṃphate manaḥ HSC

Commentary: Verses 3.97*2–3 are absent in the α group and have no known source. They elaborate further on the instruction to practise bhastrī kumbhaka in 3.96. The practice of other kumbhakas for moving Kuṇḍalinī is mentioned in 3.97*3.

The reading abhyāsato in 3.97*2c, which is attested by manuscripts of the γ group and the testimonia, is possible but seems to be a corruption of the participle, abhyasato.

3.97*3

Translation: Then [the yogi] should practise sūryabheda, ujjāyī and also śitalī. Where is the god of death for the ascetic engaged in the practice in this way?

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 79r (attrib. Haṭhayoga)

cāpi YCM | vāpi HSC

śamano | yamas tu YCM HSC

Commentary: On why this verse is in greyscale, see the note to 3.97*2.

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (a: ra-vipulā)

3.98

Translation: As a result of fearlessly moving [Kuṇḍalinī] for one hour 36 minutes (two muhūrtas), Suṣumṇā at Kuṇḍalinī is drawn up slightly.

Sources:

Gorakṣasataka 22c–23b

nirbhayaṃ | nirbhayaś GŚ, nirbharaś GŚv.l., nirbhayāc GŚv.l.

cālanād asau] cālayed imām GŚ
 ākr̥ṣyate GŚ] ākar̥ṣayet GŚv.l.
 suṣumnā kuṇḍaligatā GŚ] suṣumnām kuṇḍaligatām GŚv.l., suṣumnā kuṇḍaliyutā GŚv.l.

Cf. Śivasamhitā 4.109

gurūpadeśavidhinā tasya mṛtyubhayaṃ kutah/muhūrtadvayaparyantaṃ vidhinā śakticālanam//

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.121, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 79r (ab only) (attrib. Haṭhayoga) nirbhayaṃ] nirbhitaś HRĀ, nirbhayaś YLĀ, nirbharam YCM cālanād asau] cālayed asau HRĀ, cālayed imām YLĀ, dhi vai YCM ākr̥ṣyate HRĀ] ākr̥ṣya tau HRĀv.l. suṣumnām kuṇḍali gatā HRĀv.l.] suṣumnām kuṇḍaligatām HRĀ, suṣumnā kuṇḍaliyutā

 YLĀ

Commentary: As noted in the introduction (p. 28), Svātmārāma appears not to have understood the practice of śakticālana in the same way as his primary source text for its description, the Gorakṣaśataka, in which a cloth is wrapped around the tongue so that it can be repeatedly pulled, thereby lifting up the base of the central channel. He does not include the Gorakṣaśataka verses which mention the tongue or the cloth (but some later recensions of the Haṭhapradīpikā do introduce them). Verses 98 and 99 suggest that he understood the practice to involve repeated contraction of the region of the sun at the lower end of the central channel. The result is the same, namely that Kuṇḍalinī is awakened and uncoils herself, thereby allowing Prāṇa to enter the central channel.

3.99

Translation: Extracted from Suṣumnā by this [practice], Kuṇḍalinī leaves it. As a result of this, prāṇa automatically enters Suṣumnā.

Sources:

Gorakṣaśataka 23c-24b

suṣumnāyāḥ samuddhṛtā] suṣumnāyā mukhaṃ dhruvam GŚ

Testimonia:

Haṭhatattvakaumudī 44.25

suṣumnāyāḥ samuddhṛtā] suṣumnāyā mukhaṃ dhruvam HTK

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (c: ma-vipulā)

3.100

Translation: Therefore [the yogi] should regularly make Arundhatī move, she who contains speech. By making her move the yogi is freed from diseases.

Sources:Gorakṣaśataka 26cd–27ab

garbhām arundhatīm] garbhām sarasvatīm GŚ tasyāḥ] yasyāḥ GŚ

Testimonia:Yogalakṣaṇāvalī f. 31r (attrib. Gorakṣaśataka), Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā f. 112r (attrib. HP) garbhām arundhatīm HSC] garbhām sarasvatī YLĀ tasyāḥ] asyāḥ YLĀ, yasyāḥ HSC cālanenaiva] cālanenaivaṃ YLĀ, cālanenāśu HSC yogī rogaiḥ pramucyate HSC] rogā naśyamti niścitaṃ YLĀ

Cf. Haṭharatnāvalī 2.122

sūryeṇa pūrayed vāyumaṃ sarasvatyās tu cālayet/śabdagarbhācālanena yogī rogaiḥ pramucyate//

Commentary: In the Gorakṣaśataka (26cd–27ab), the source text, this verse occurs in a passage on sarasvatīcālana, which is the practice of moving the tongue (i.e. sarasvatī) by wrapping a cloth around it and tugging it in order to raise the lower end of the Suṣumṇā. In the Gorakṣaśataka, Sarasvatī is said to be another name for Arundhatī and, since the tongue is instrumental for speech and sarasvatī is the name of a Goddess identified with speech (vāc), the Gorakṣaśataka’s reading of śabdagarbhām sarasvatīm makes good sense. However, it seems that Svātmārāma has changed 3.100b to read śabdagarbhām arundhatīm and has understood arundhatī as Kuṇḍalinī. This is affirmed in longer versions of the Haṭhapradīpikā (3.93*2) that contain a verse on synonyms of Kuṇḍalinī, which include Arundhatī. We are yet to find Arundhatī equated with Kuṇḍalinī in a text composed before the Haṭhapradīpikā but this identification is found in subsequent compendiums and commentaries (e.g. Yogacintāmaṇi f. 78v, Yuktabhavadēva 7.300, Ĵyotsnā 104, 119, Yogaprakāśikā 5.166).

3.101

Translation: The yogi who has made Kuṇḍalinī move is worthy of success. There is no point in speaking at length about this. He easily conquers death.

Testimonia:Haṭharatnāvalī 2.123, Yogalakṣaṇāvalī (f. 31r) (attrib. Gorakṣaśataka), Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā f. 112r (attrib. HP) sa yogī siddhibhājanam HSC] sa yogī siddhibhājanaḥ HRĀ, śabdagarbhā tv arundhati

 YLĀ
 kālaṃ jayati līlayā HSC] mṛtyuṃ jayati līlayā HRĀ, tasya kālabhayaṃ na hi YLĀ

3.101*1

Translation: For the yogi who observes celibacy, always eats a healthy and measured diet, and practises with Kuṇḍalinī, success is seen after forty days (maṇḍalāt).

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 79r (attrib. Haṭhayoga), Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā f. 112r–112v (attrib. HP) vratasyaiva] ratasyaiva YCM, jatasyaiva HSC hitamitāśinaḥ YCM] hitamitām śanaiḥ HSC

Cf. Yogalakṣaṇāvalī (f. 31r) (attrib. Gorakṣasataka) brahmācaryavratasyaiva kuṇḍalyabhyāsayogināḥ// maṇḍalād dr̥ṣyate siddhir iti yogavido viduḥ//

Commentary: Verse 3.101*1 has been omitted by α_1 and α_3 . It is in α_2 at the end of a block of verses (3.93*2–5, 93*7) that is excluded by α_3 . This block appears after 3.96 and appears to have been inserted from elsewhere. 3.101*1 has no known source and appears to have been added as a general laudatory statement on the benefits of practising with Kuṇḍalinī.

The meaning of maṇḍalād in 3.101*1c is not clear. Brahmānanda understands it as a period of time (i.e. forty days) but we are yet to find this attested elsewhere.

3.102

Translation: The yogi should mix with ash the fluid of the moon emitted as a result of the practice. Wearing that [mixture] on the head bestows divine sight.

Testimonia:

Yogalakṣaṇāvalī f. 31r (attrib. Gorakṣasataka)

tūttamāṅge] cottamāṅge YLĀ

Cf. Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā f. 112v (attrib. HP) abhyāsaṇiḥśṛtām cāndrīm vibhūtyā saha miśrayet/taddhāraṇam tūttamāṅge divyadr̥ṣṭipradāyakaṃ// 19 cāndrīm lalāṭacandrān niḥśṛtām abhyāse śramajātām gharmadhārām tām vibhūtyā vimiśrayet/ tām uttamāṅge śirasi dhārayed asau sādhakasya divyadr̥ṣṭipradā bhravatīty arthaḥ/

Cf. Haṭhayogasamhitā p. 41 (on amarolī)

abhyāsān niḥśṛtām cāndrīm vibhūtyā saha miśrayet/dhārayed uttamāṅgeṣu divyadr̥ṣṭiḥ prajāyate//

Commentary: In the witnesses of the earliest reconstructable recensions of the Haṭhapradīpikā, including the α manuscripts, this verse occurs in the section on śakticālana. This is also the case in the Yogalakṣaṇāvalī, Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā and the longer recensions of the Haṭhapradīpikā with six and ten chapters. However, in the context of śakticālana, the referent of cāndrī is unclear. It appears to be understood as some sort of lunar fluid. In his Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā (see the testimonia), Sundaradeva defines it as a flow of perspiration (gharmadhārā) that arises from exertion in the practice and is emitted from the moon in forehead (lalāṭacandra). In the Yogaparakāśikā, Bālakṛṣṇa glosses it simply as nectar (sudhā) (5.182). In the Haṭhayogasamhitā (p. 41) and Īyotsnā (3.98), this verse is in the section on amarolī, which provides a clear referent of cāndrī as the cool middle flow of urine (see 3.96 [3.90 in our edition]).

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (c: ra-vipulā)

3.102*1

Translation: For purifying the seventy-two thousand channels, there is no method of cleansing without the practice of Kuṇḍalinī.

Testimonia:

Yogacintāmaṇi f. 79v (attrib. Haṭhayoga), Yogalakṣaṇāvalī f. 31r (attrib. Gorakṣa-śataka) malaśodhane] malaśodhanam YCM, api śodhanam YLĀ kutaḥ prakṣālanopāyaḥ YCM] asatkalpaṁ smṛtaṁ siddhaiḥ YLĀ abhyasanād r̥te YLĀ] abhyāsato vinā YCM

Commentary: This verse is omitted by the α group. Its claim is not entirely consistent with the role of the ṣaṭkarma, which are cleansing techniques that do not require Kuṇḍalinī. It was likely added to the original text as a further laudatory statement on the practice of Kuṇḍalinī.

3.102*1 ending

Translation:

3.103

Translation: Thus have the ten mudrās been taught by Śiva Ādinātha. Each of them can bestow liberation for those who observe the rules.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 2.35, Yogacintāmaṇi f. 79v (attrib. granthāntara)

tāsu yamināṁ YCM] mukhyā syān HRĀ

Commentary: Manuscripts of the ε, ζ, η, and π groups have a different reading for the second line; ‘each mudrā is capable of bringing about all powers’ (karāṇe sarvasiddhīnām ekaikāpi kṣamaiva sā).

3.104

Translation: Without a king the earth is not resplendent, without the moon the night does not sparkle, and without Rājayoga the wonderful [practice of] mudrā does not shine.

Testimonia:

Haṭharatnāvalī 1.16

Commentary: The Yogapraśāsikā (5.186) interprets the similes in this verse as we have translated them, ‘Just as without a king [and] moon, the earth and night do not shine...’ (yathā mahīpālaṃ candramasaṃ vinā pṛthvinīśe na rājete...). However, in Jyotsnā 3.126, Brahmānanda interprets the earth (pṛthvī) as āsana because both are connected by the quality of steadiness (sthairyaguṇayogāt), and the night (nīśā) as breath retention (kumbhaka) because both are characterised by the absence of movement of people and wind (prāṇasañcārābhāvalakṣaṇaḥ). Brahmānanda’s interpretation seems somewhat far-fetched.

The last line could also be understood in a non-yogic meaning: “Without a king a coin (or a seal) does not shine”, probably referring to coins onto which the head of the king were stamped. Strangely, this śleṣa does not have any poetical function here.

Metre: Anuṣṭubh (c: na-vipulā)

3.105

Translation: [The yogi] should carry out all breath practice with his mind engaged. The wise man must not let his attention wander.

Testimonia:

Haṭhasaṅketacandrikā f. 92v (attrib. HP) mārutasya vidhiṃ sarvaṃ] mārutābhyasaṇaṃ kiṃ cin HSC samabhyaset] samācāret HSC

3.106

Translation: Through yogis’ steady practice by means of postures, breath retentions and mudrās, their central channels, even though untraversed, become straight.

Testimonia:

Upāsanaśārasaṅgraha p. 36

khilāpi] iyaṃ tu USS

Commentary: The reading of khilāpi in the first verse quarter is unusual but well attested by the witnesses including the α group of manuscripts. In the Abhidhāna-cintāmaṇi (940), khila is defined as something uncultivated such as field (kṣetrādyapra-hataṃ khilam) or, as the Amarapadavivṛti (2.1.5) puts it, ‘not marked by a plough’ (lāṅgalena na likhitam iti khilam). In the context of Haṭhapradīpikā 3.106, qualifying suṣumṇā with khila implies that the central channel has yet to be cultivated (i.e. traversed).

3.107

Translation: And for those who are tireless in their dedication, the peerless mudrā of Śiva bestows great perfection, like the ocean of Rājayoga.

Commentary: We understand rudrāṇi mudrā to be a synonym of śāmbhavī mudrā, which is taught in the next chapter.

3.107*1

Translation: May [the yogi] who offers the traditional teaching of the mudrās be the guru, the master. He is none but the Lord himself.

Testimonia:

Upāsanāsārasaṅgraha p. 40

evāstu guruḥ] eva śrīguruḥ USS

Commentary: Verses 3.107*1–2 have no known source and are absent in the α group. It is likely both were added to the original text as further praise of those practising the haṭhayogic mudrās.

3.107*2

Translation: The yogi who has become intent on that [guru’s] teaching and practises a mudrā with a focused mind cheats death with the powers beginning with minimisation.

Commentary: No version of this verse is entirely satisfactory. See the note on 3.107*1 for why it is in greyscale.

colophon

Translation: Thus ends the third chapter in the Haṭhapradīpikā composed by the glorious lord among yogis Svātmārāma.