Commentary: We are not certain of the meaning of devamārga here. MONIER-WILLIAMS (s.v. 1899) says it means the sky but one would expect it to have a more specific astrological meaning in a list of stars and planets. It could be a synonym for devapatha, which can mean the Milky Way according to one lexicographical source (Trikāṇḍaśeṣa 1.1.97). The reference in the Viṣṇudharmottarapurāṇa (see the Testimonia) suggests it is a celestial object that shines.

Arundhatī is mentioned in the Brhatsaṁhitā (13.6) and is said to be close to Vasiṣṭha (tatra vasiṣṭham munivaram upāśritārundhatī sādhvī). Vasiṣṭha and Arundhatī are the double star, Mizar and Alcor in the saptarṣi nakṣatra (Ursa Major). See RAO 2019: 53.

Commentary: In the version of this verse transmitted in the Haṭhapradīpikā, the relative pronoun yaḥ requires a verb in the first hemistich, as seen in the Yogacintāmaṇi, whose verse is a close parallel to the one in question, hence our emendation of vātyāṃ to vamen (cf. Yogacintāmaṇi).

The idea behind this verse is clearly expressed in the Dharmaputrikā, where the yogi whose urine and faeces become gold and silver, in reality or in sleep, has eight months left to live.

Commentary: It seems more likely that mārutaḥ here refers to the breath rather than external wind, since it is difficult to conceive how wind could cut the vital points, which are located inside the body. In his commentary on Chāndogya-upaniṣat 6.8.6, Śaṅkara describes an internal process in which the breath cuts vital points as a person dies, with the breath merging into heat, which in turn merges into the highest deity (prāṇaś ca tadordhvocchvāsī svātmany upasaṃhṛtabāhyakaraṇaḥ saṃvargavidyāyām darśanād dhastapādādīn vikṣīpan marmasthānāni nikṛṇ-tann ivotsrjan krameṇopasaṃhṛtas tejasi sampadyate [...]). Similarly, the first half of a parallel verse in the Dharmaputrikā (213) appears to be describing an internal process in which the breath is disturbed and then escapes from the vital points.

Commentary: The original version of the first line was probably that of the Skandapurāṇa, where the verse conveys the idea of a waterless river filled with hair, charcoal, ash or snakes. However, it seems that at some point this idea was lost, and each of these elements came to be treated separately, as in Liṅgapurāṇa 1.91.19.

Commentary: The syntax of the verse transmitted by the Haṭhapradīpikā manuscripts is faulty, since mṛtyuḥ appears as the subject, whereas the subject should be a man (naraḥ), as found in the Mārkaṇḍeyapurāṇa (40.20) and Śārṅgadharapaddhati (4585). It makes little sense for death to be struck by stones etc., so the reading of the Śārṅgadharapaddhati's final pāda has been adopted.

The original idea appears to be expressed in the Dharmaputrikā, where the cheeks turn yellow and red (gaṇḍau tu pītakau raktau), and the introduction of the word piṇḍikā has caused confusion.

Commentary: In Haṭhapradīpikā 10.21, Bālakṛṣṇa glosses layasthānaṃ ("the place of dissolution") with brahmarandhraṃ. This makes good sense here because in verse 51 the self goes to the tenth door (i.e. the brahmarandhra) to dissolve into the supreme self and, in verse 60, the yogi meditates on dissolving into Śiva, who is on the thousand-petalled lotus, which is usually located at the brahmarandhra.

Commentary: The reason the sun-stone seems to be an example of a yogi here is that this stone was used to create fire like a magnifying glass, when it was in contact with the sun, much like the yogi is liberated-in-life when he becomes one with Śiva (62b). The fire-producing quality of the sun-stone (more commonly known as sūryakānta or agnimaṇi, etc.) is described in Rājanighaṇṭu 13.205cd: “That is a sun-stone from which real fire is emitted upon contact with the sun rays” (yaḥ sūryāṃśusparśaṇiṣṭhyūtavahnir jātyaḥ so ’yaṃ jāyate sūryakāntaḥ).
